The building forms the basic unit around which life for its students revolves. For some it is just another building; for others it is a prison. At times, though, it conveys moods of its own; it communicates in a language of signs and angles, shadows and light. In autumn it shines, in winter it whispers through the snow, and in spring it explodes with freedom and youth.

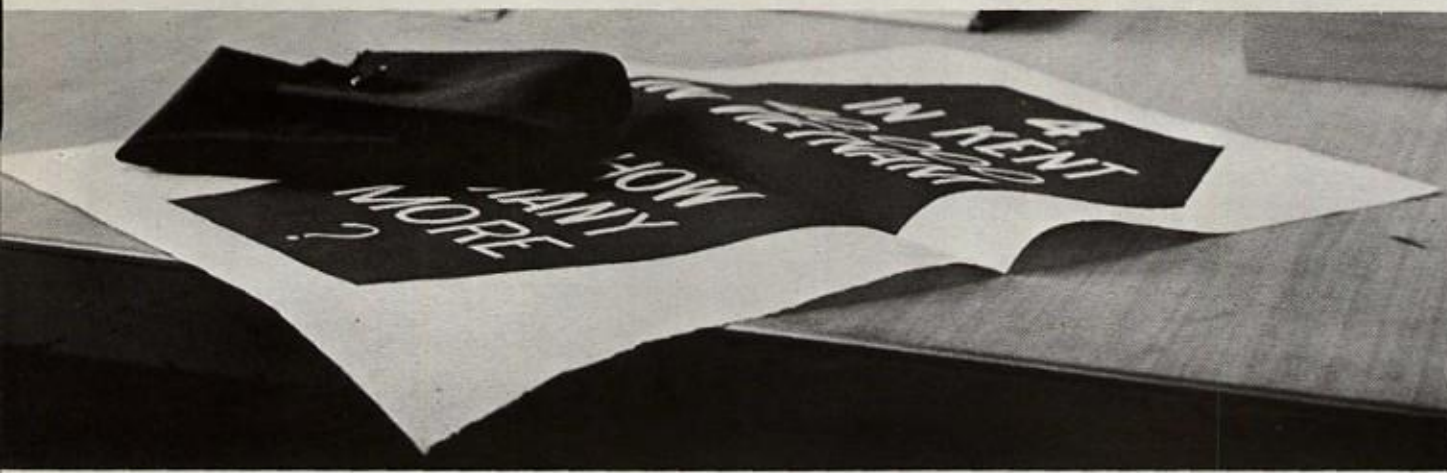

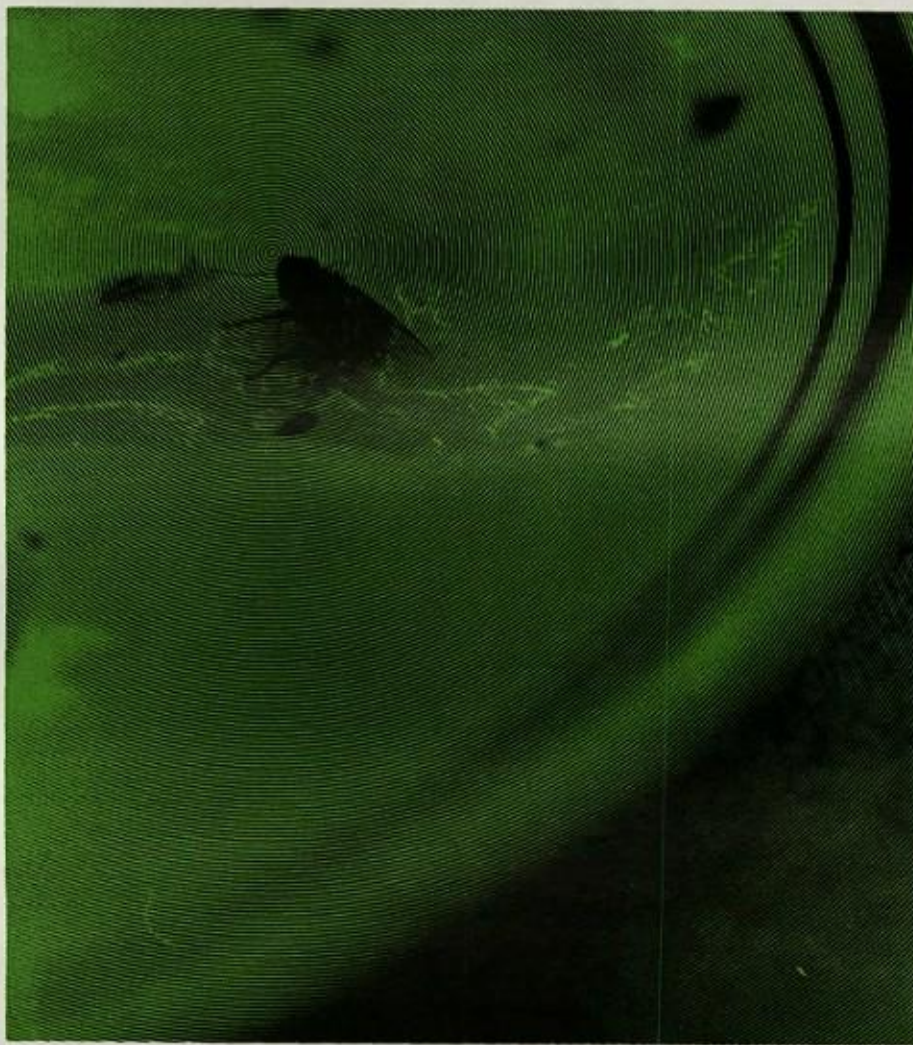

Numberless factors are involved in the growth of one being.
 For a flower they are simple things like sun and water.
 As a baby, simple things are enough for a person,
 but later comes a need for one more element:
 interaction with other people.
 Human contact
 forces a person to realize that he must both live and die, learn and teach, seize and let go.
 This alone enables him to mature.

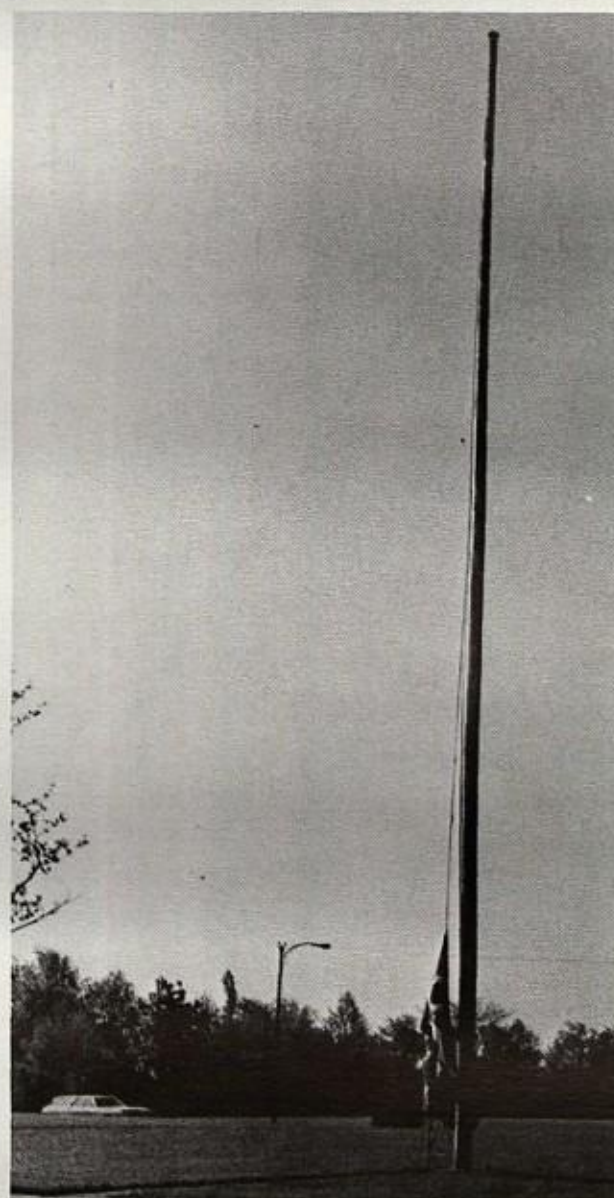

Is communication possible when only certain words may be spoken? And are teaching and learning possible without true communication?

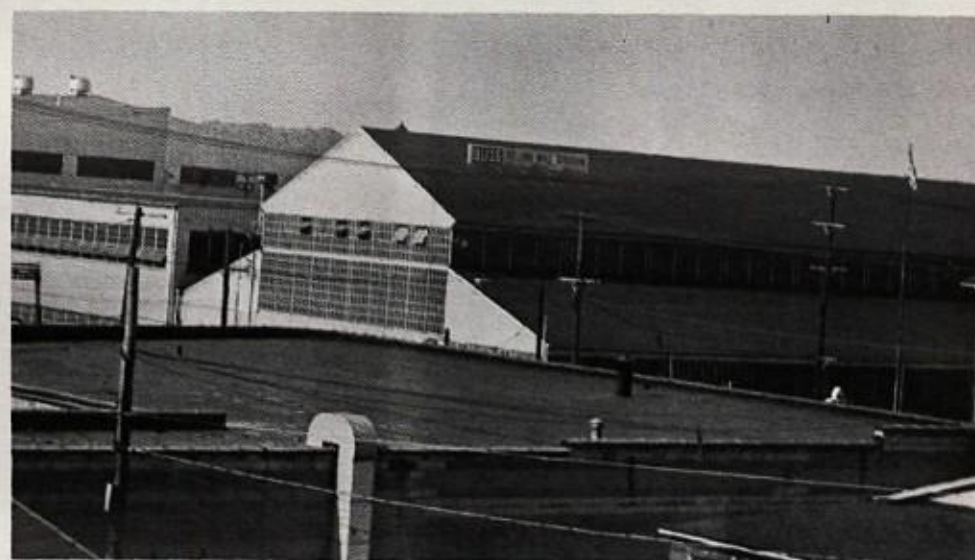

The basis of all these things is the freedom to examine all view points, not to be limited to a single perspective.

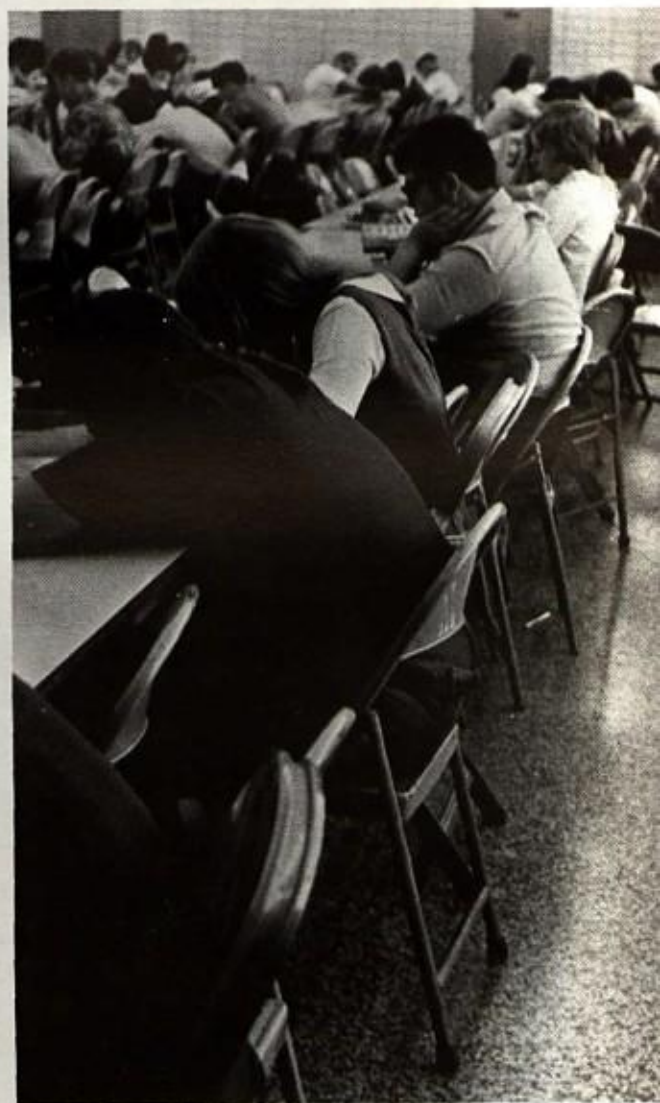

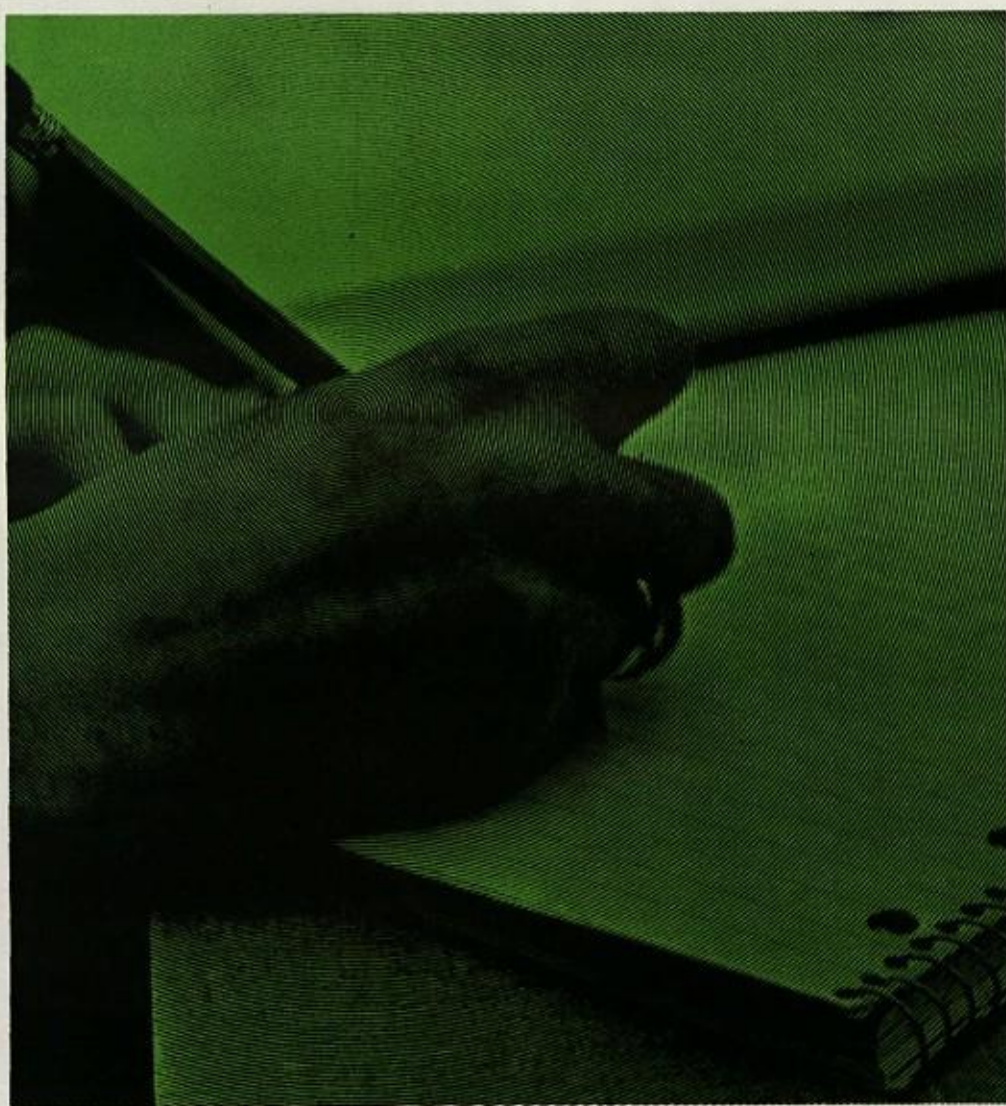

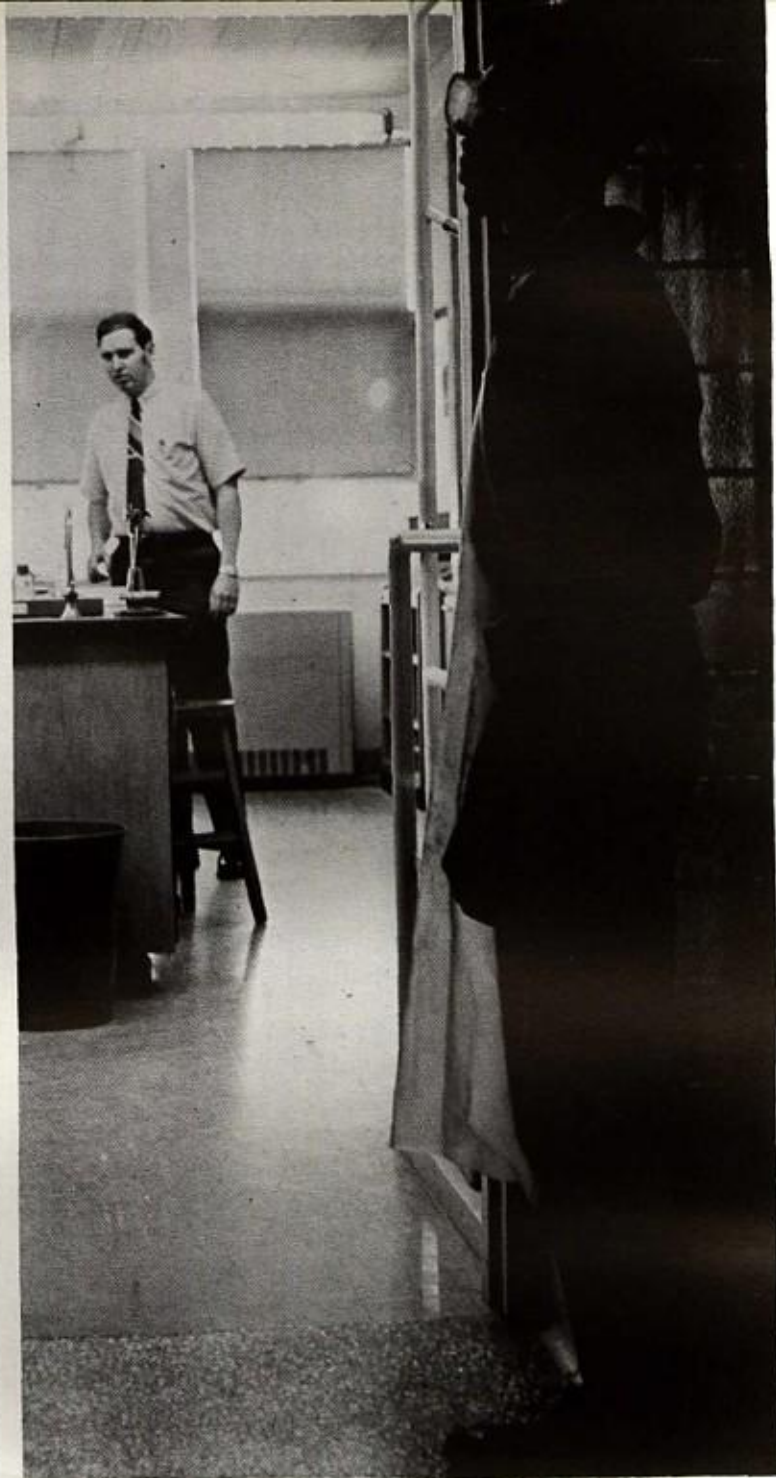

Community is more than the idea of buildings grouped in a geographical area.
Community involves committment to a certain way of life
among certain people.
Salem's way of life is as varied as the sights within its boundaries.
It is as great as the best and worst of its citizens;
it is as beautiful as its richest neighborhood
and its most neglected slum.

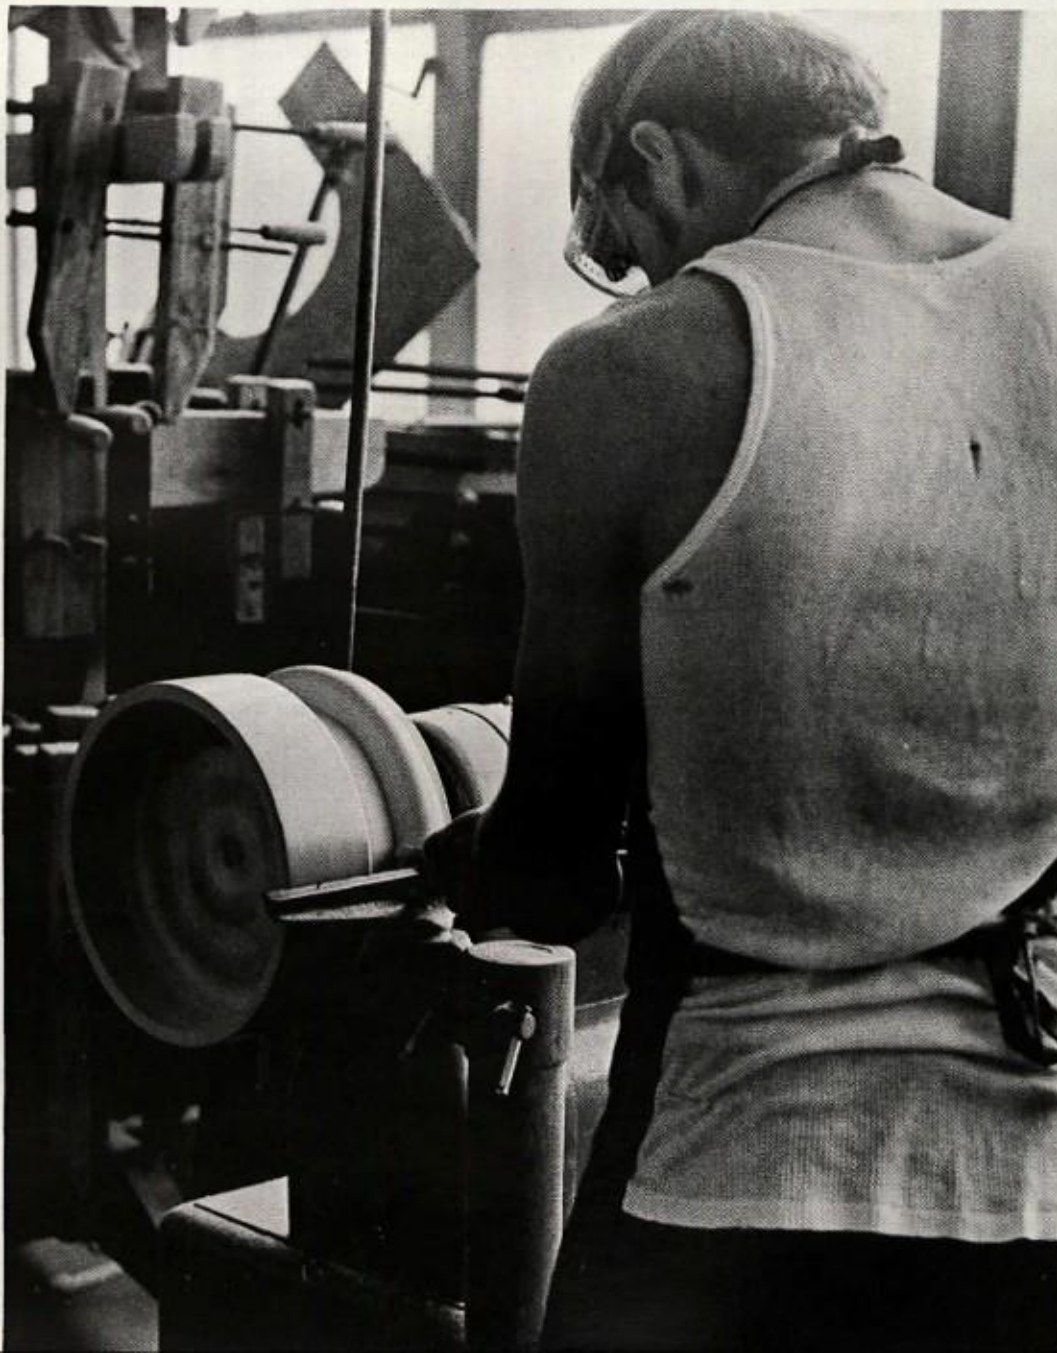

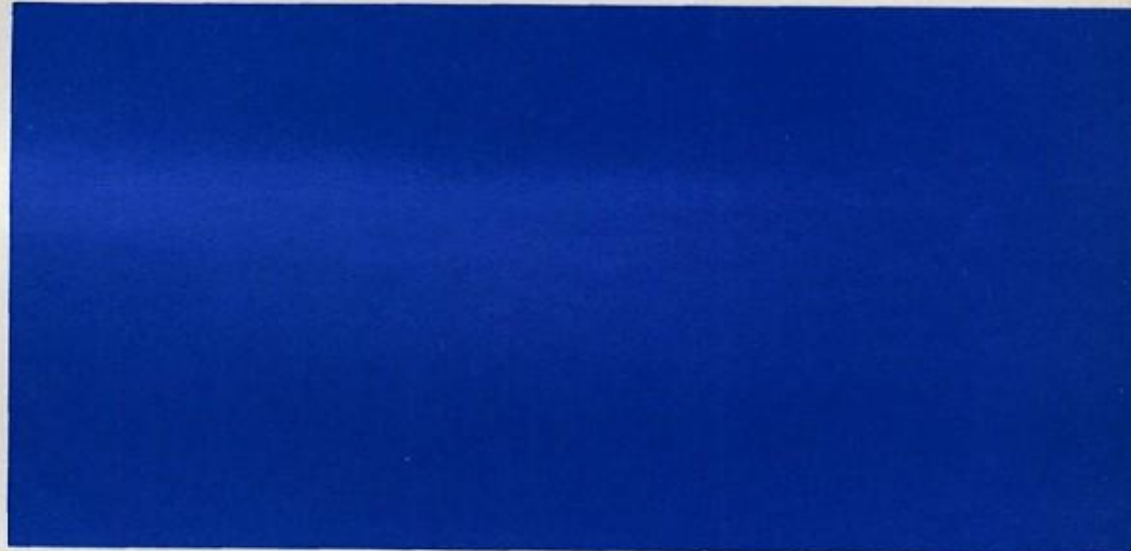

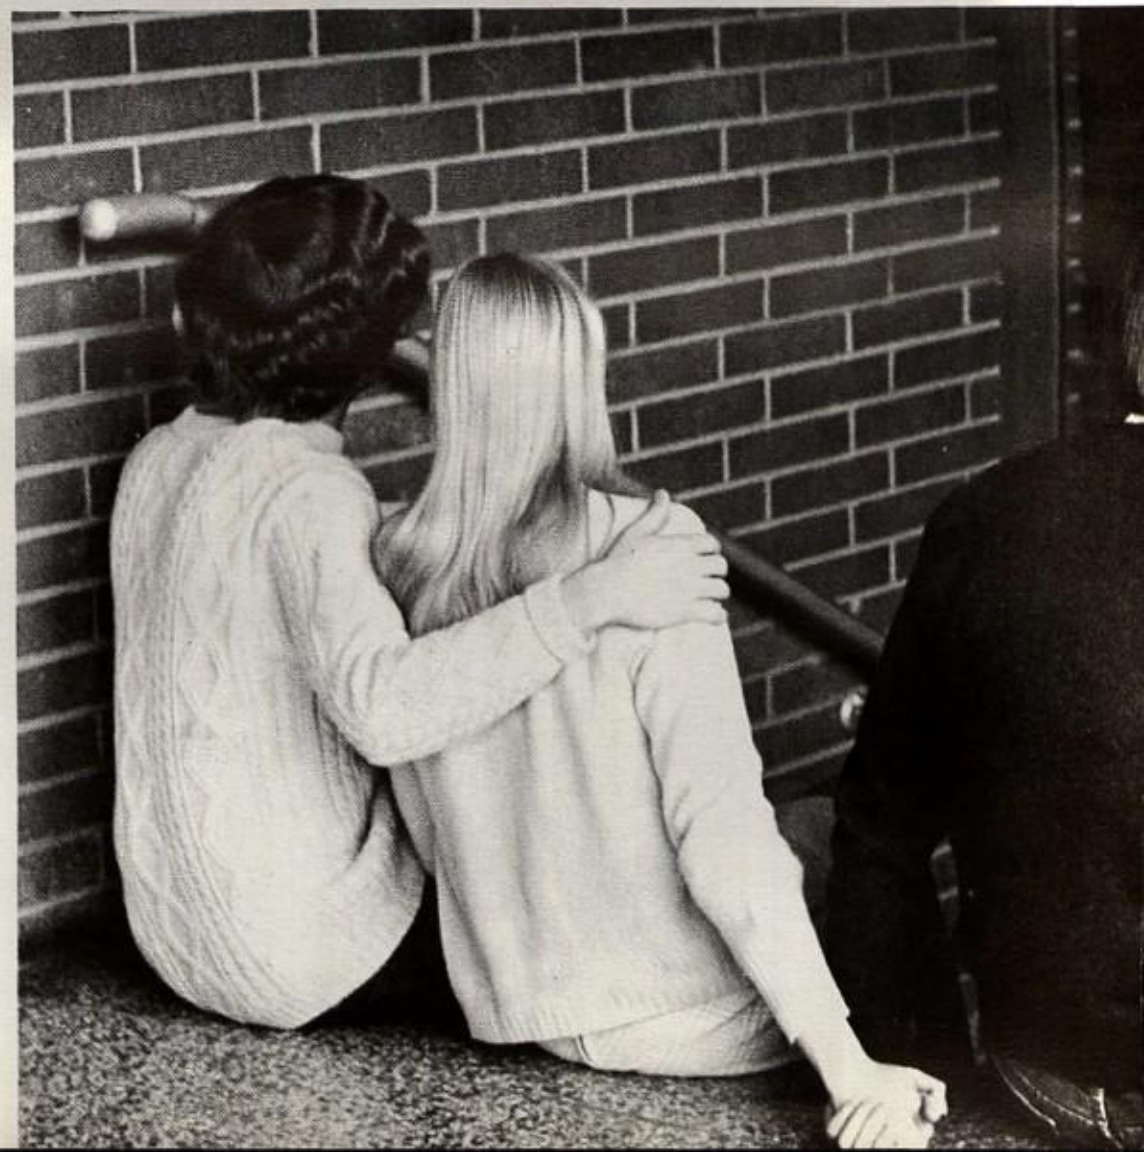

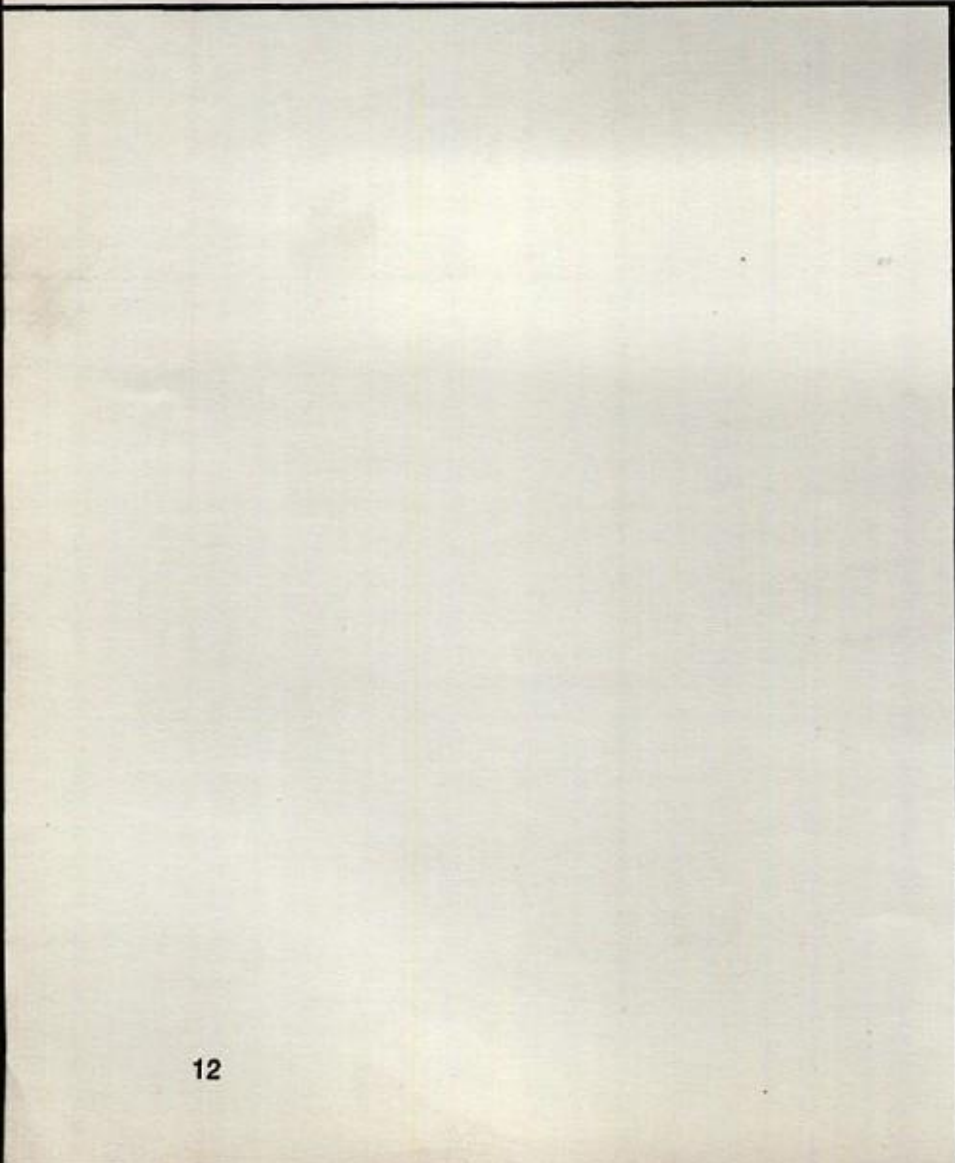

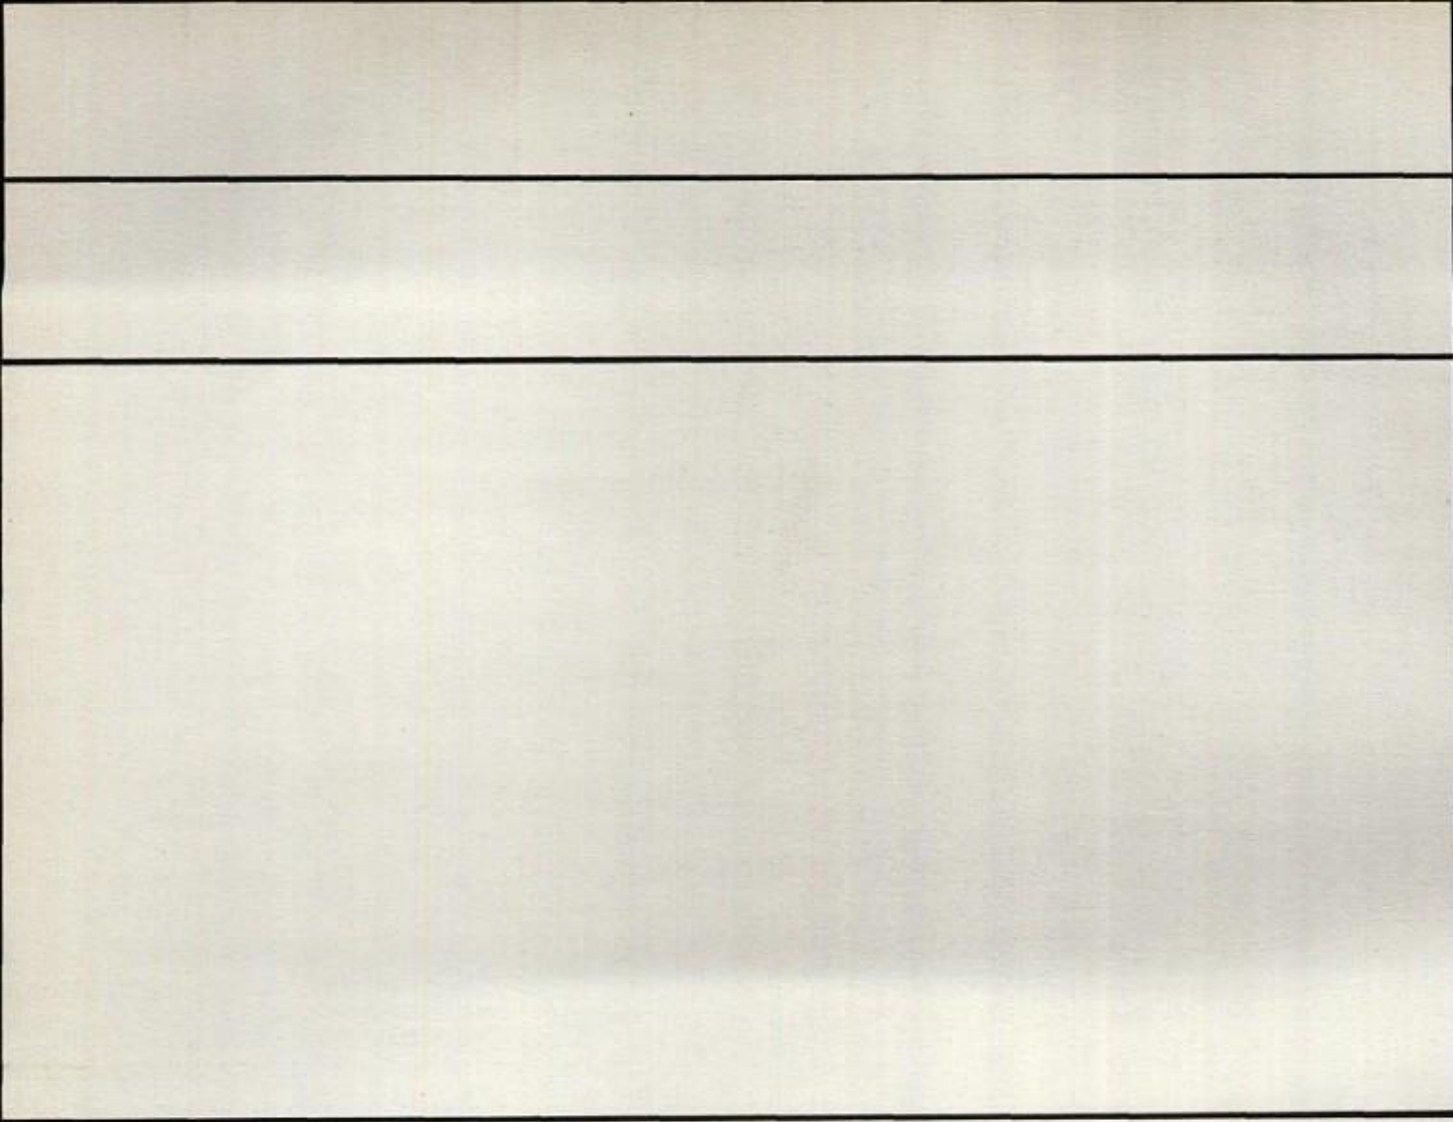

Classrooms with English in them,
others with wood shop
or chemistry inside—
each one an object of dread
or a place to sleep, even some that we wait for
with feelings that might be called eagerness.

The shoe-marks on the wall,
who-sits-here-third-period? written on the desk,
a teacher's dress
that she only wore once before:
all serve to keep us distracted while waiting for the bell.

Sometimes
real learning occurs.

People are thrown or drawn together
and this phenomenon
is a vital part of getting through high school as well as the great big
real world.
It passes time,
provokes fighting,
causes grief,
provides entertainment,
occasionally
puts down deep roots
and blossoms.

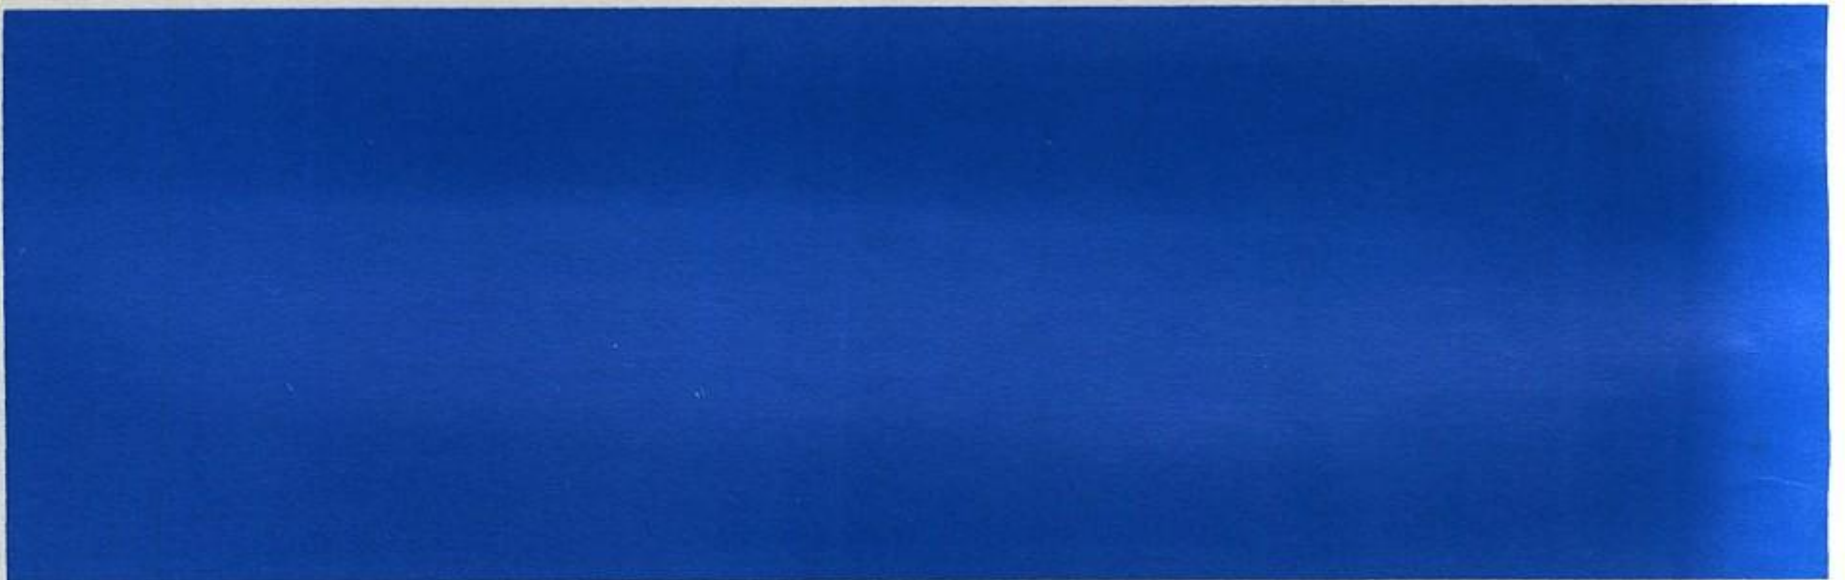

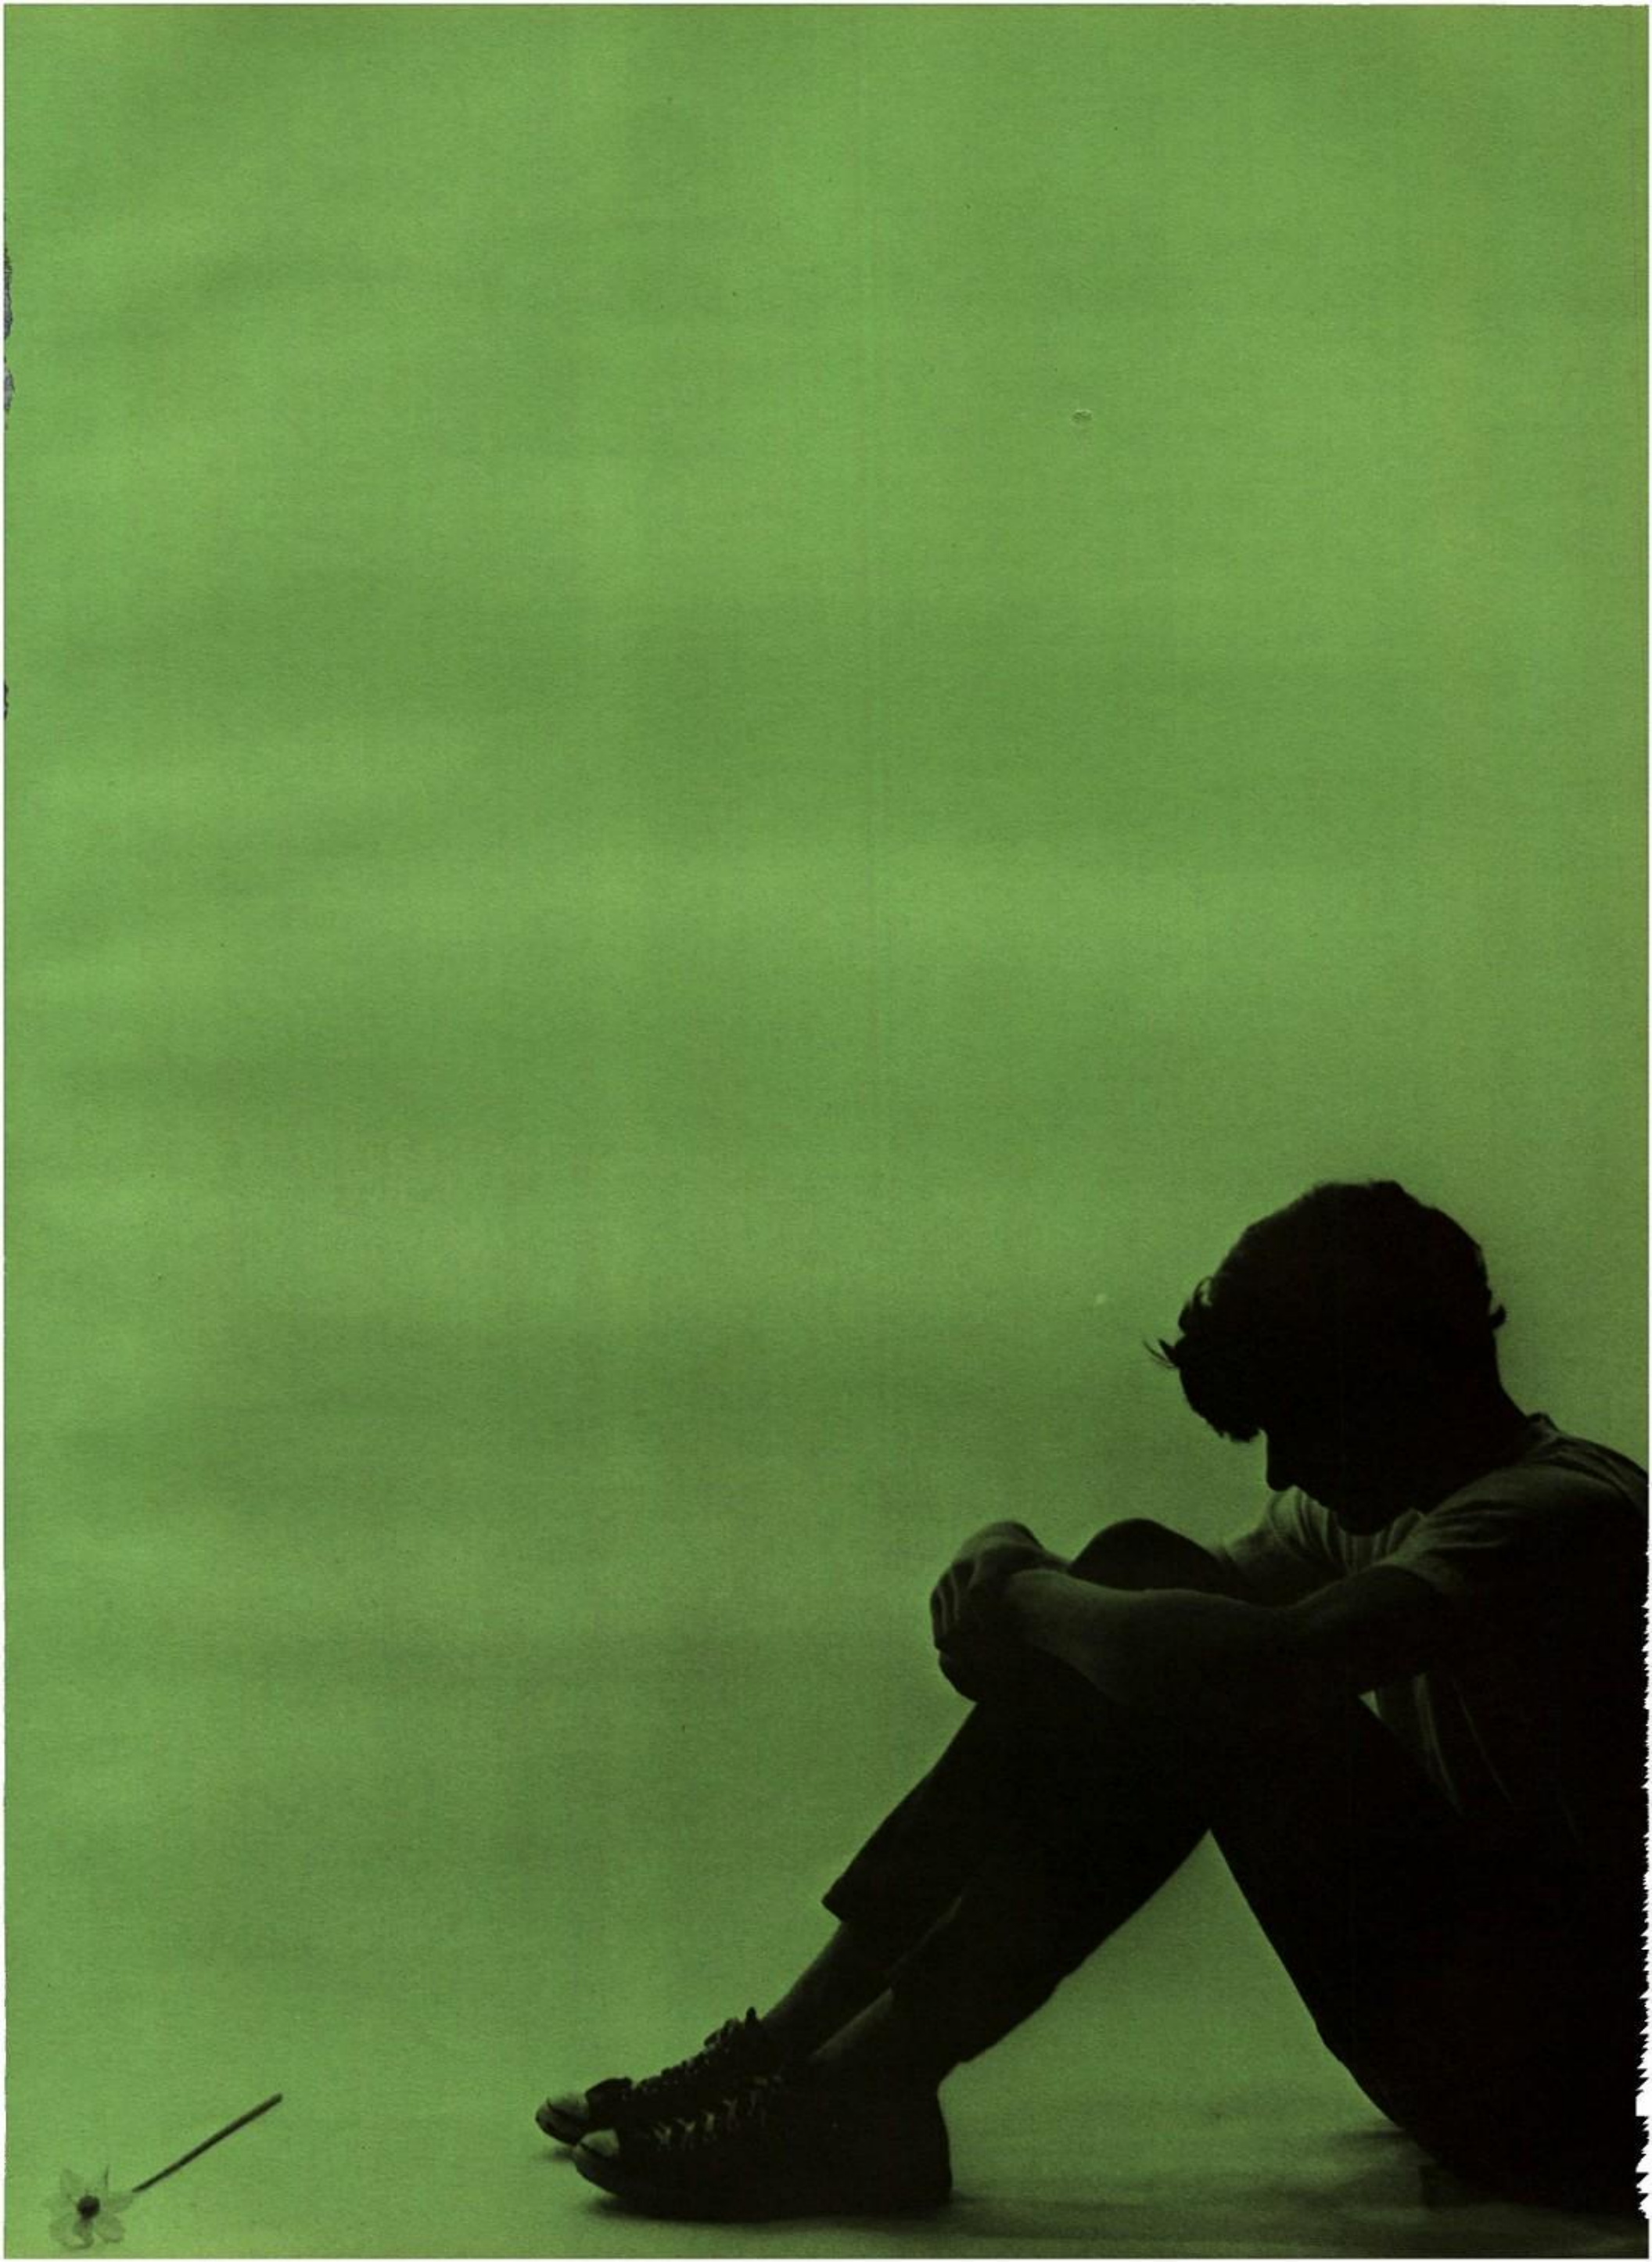

The band is an example of united effort, people really working to reach a goal and to perfect patterns as well as possible. It could be called an artistic endeavor—it is an appropriate mixture of talent, training, frustration, and enough imperfection to keep its members working for something better. Apart from its role as a promoter of spirit, it has a higher purpose. Along with all the writers, shop workers, artists, and home ec students, the band and its leaders are fighting to make something that will be remembered.

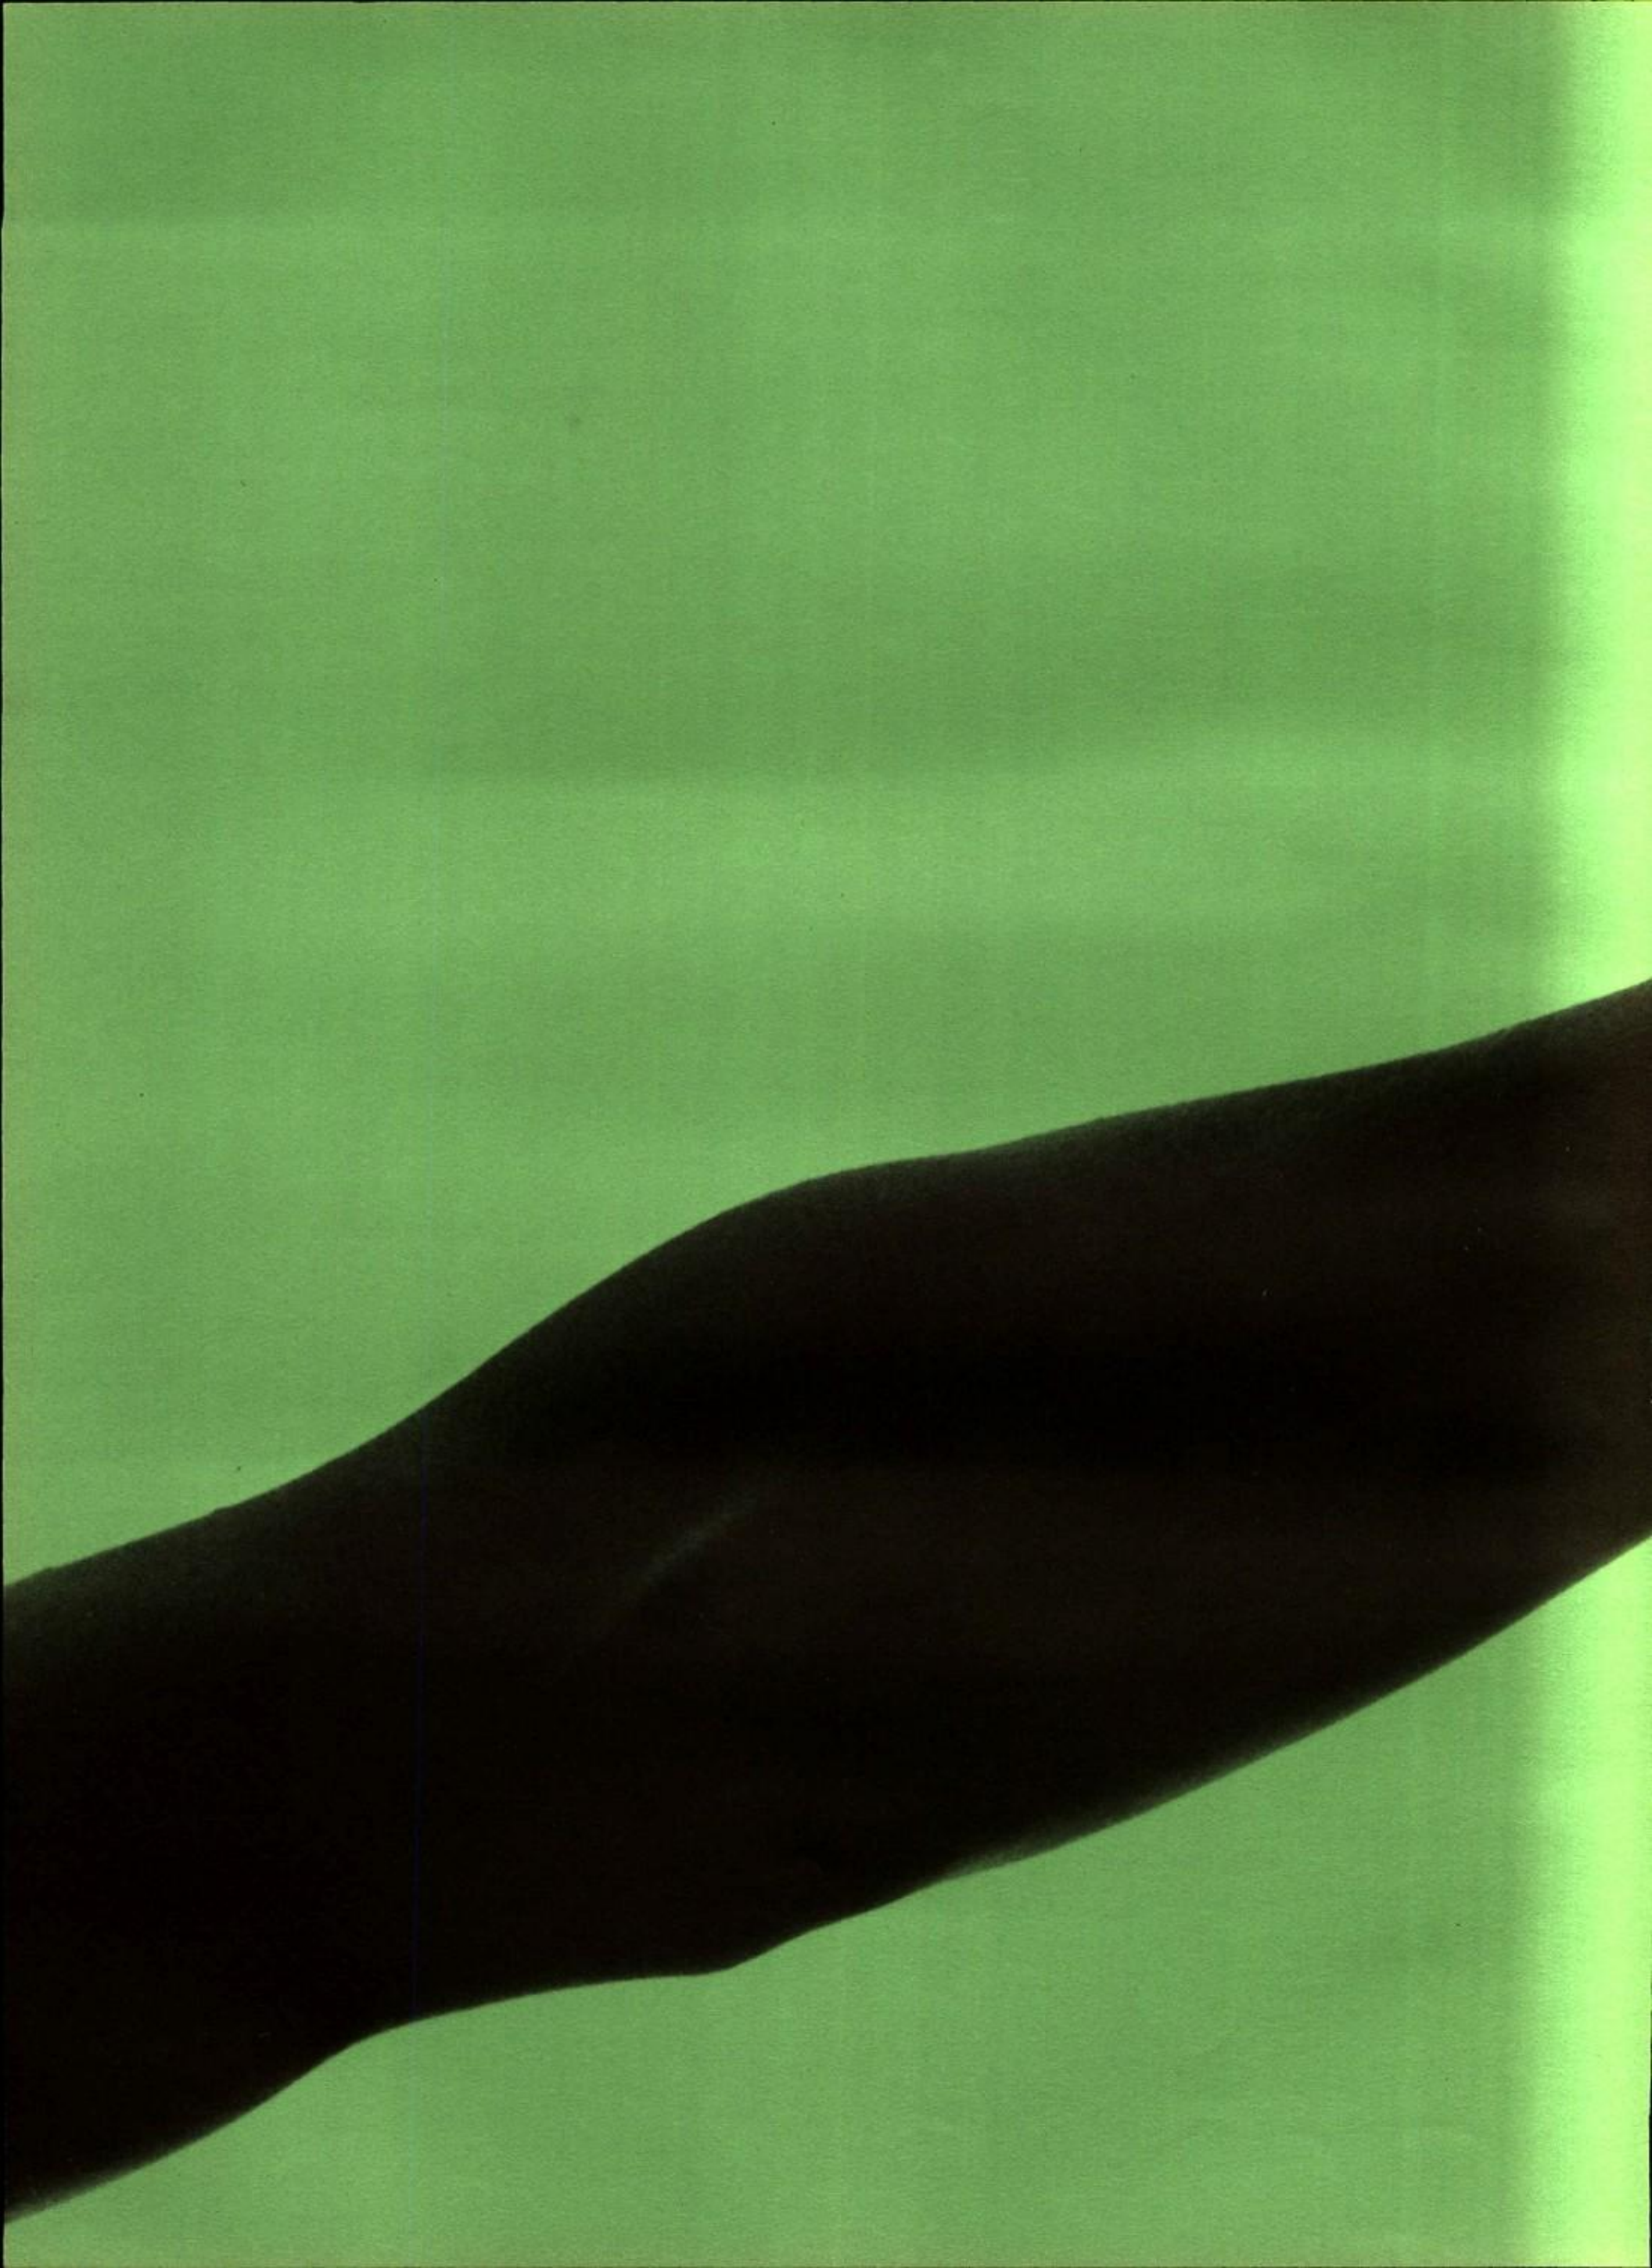

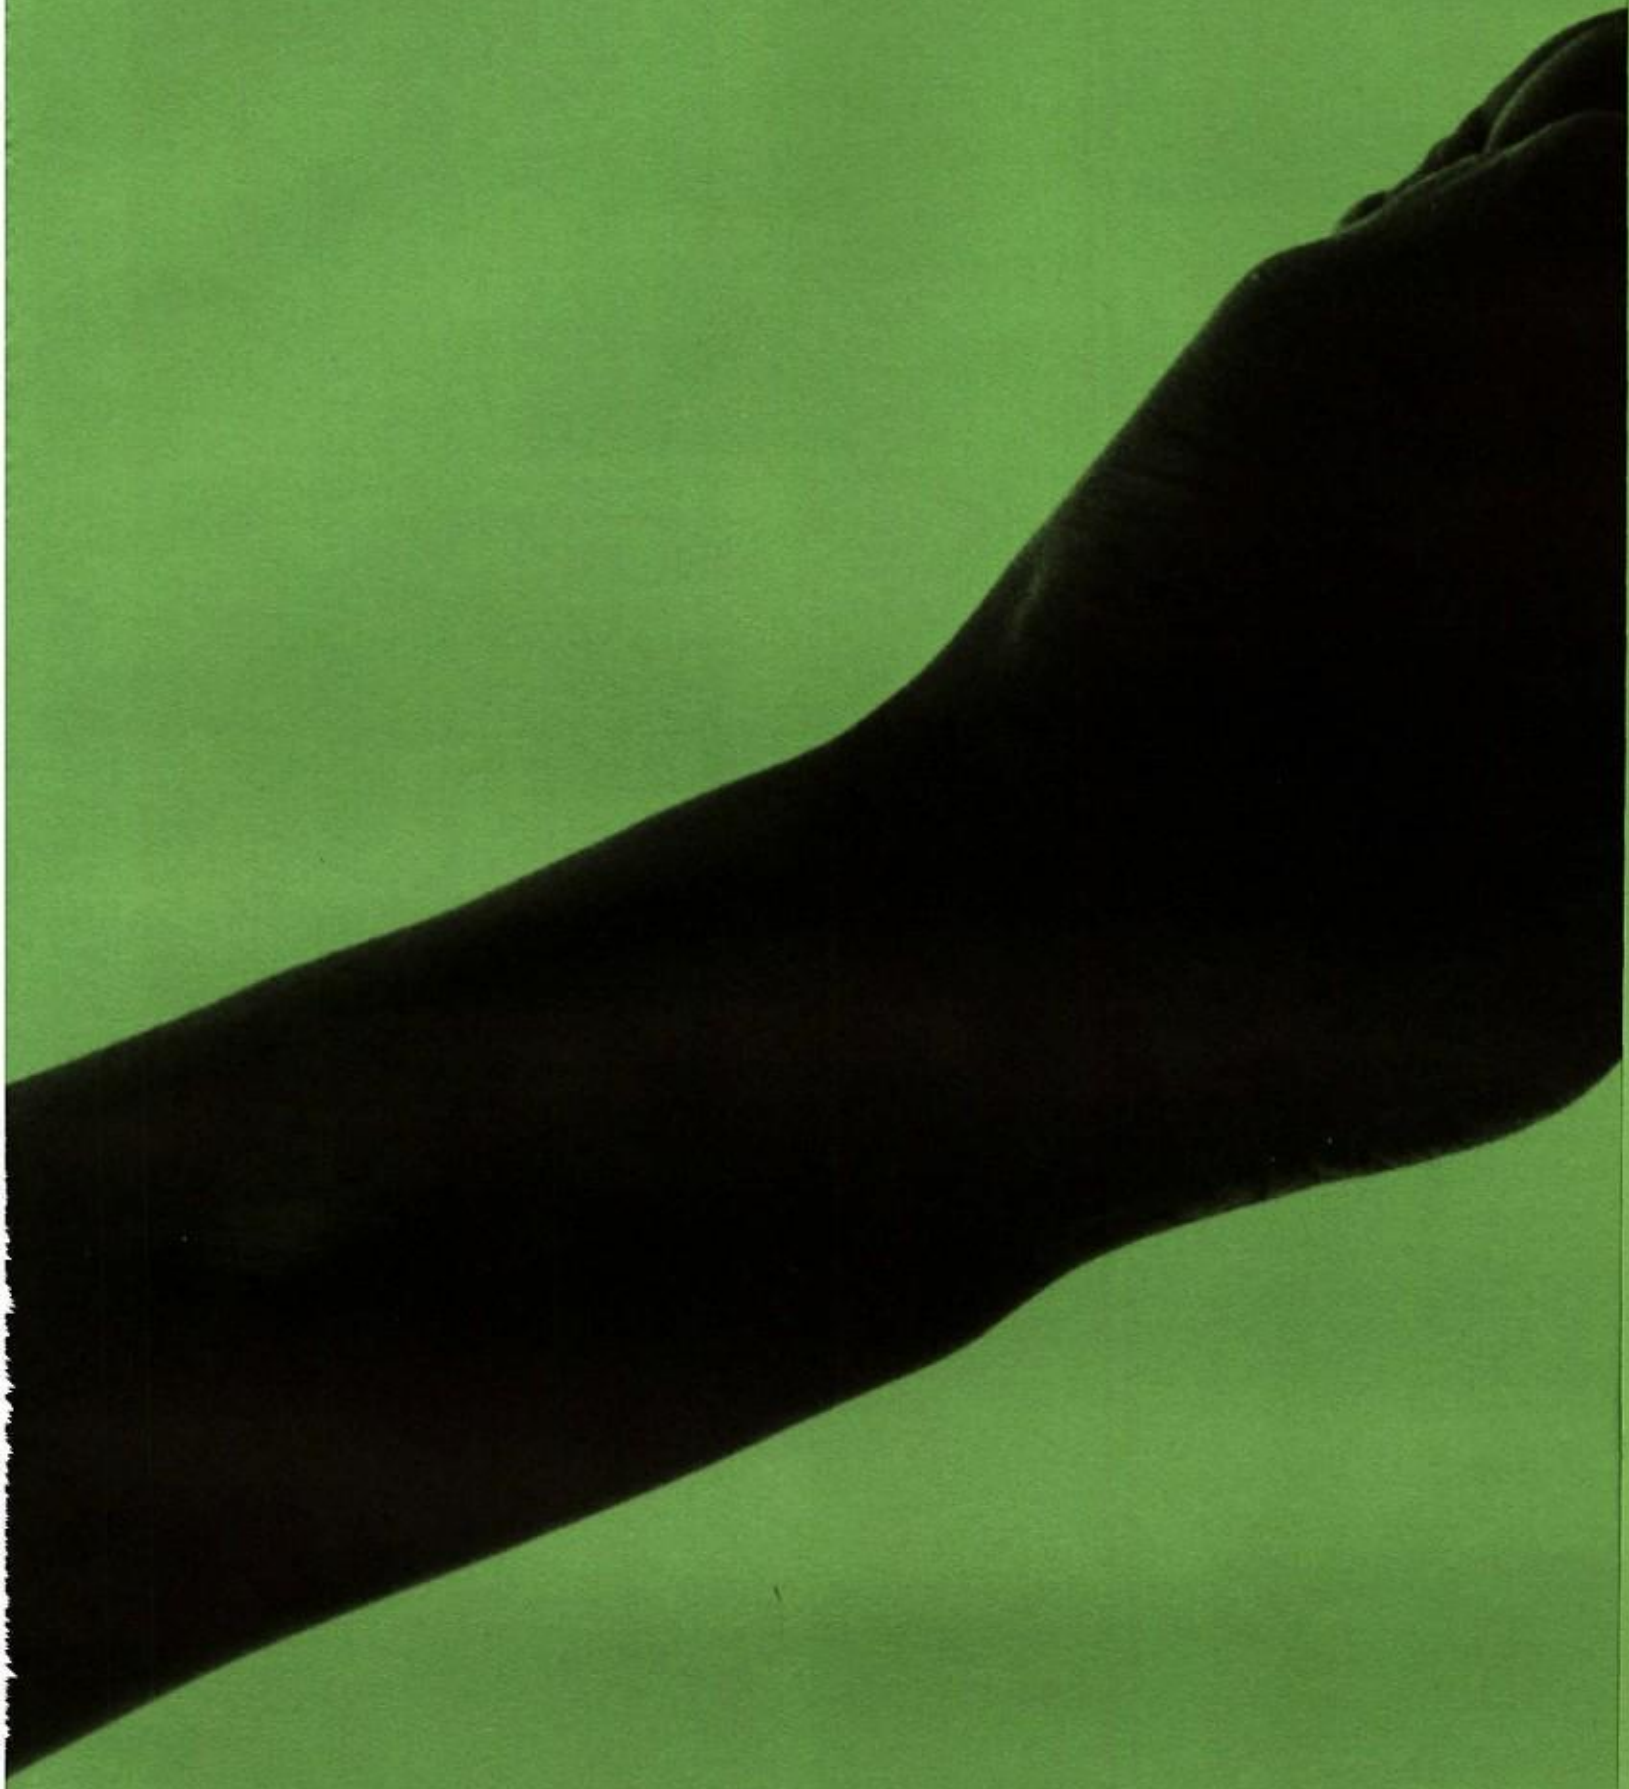

Smash together,
lose yourself in the crowd,
hurry
cramped in the hall
to lunch,
or sit bored
in a pep assembly
and make sure you don't stand up to cheer
without
the rest of your row.
Crowds are great,
but just don't let yourself get lost
as soon as you're alone.

Senior year has much within its scope—times of worry, boredom, nostalgia. It has the days in November when the year stretches in cold, gray routine before you, days in December when you recall eleven past vacations and all the emotions that went with them, days in January when you remember you're only half-way there identities revealed at special dance thrown by quaker

In late March, the Quaker Yearbook Staff sponsored a dance for the purpose of crowning the Quaker King and Queen and announcing The Senior personalities. These students were chosen by their fellow seniors as the most outstanding members of their class. The thirteen girls and ten boys were chosen because of their outgoing and cheerful dispositions which have won them many friends during their high school years.

Pam Bruderly: Ability

personalities:
buoyancy,
artistry, ability

A bouncy kind of cheerfulness typifies Mary Beth who completed her third year as a SHS majorette. Larry, gifted with artistic talent, has participated in many art shows. Pam has shown as varsity cheerleading captain her ability in conveying the Quaker spirit.

Mary Beth Beall: Buoyancy

Larry Bielski: Artistry

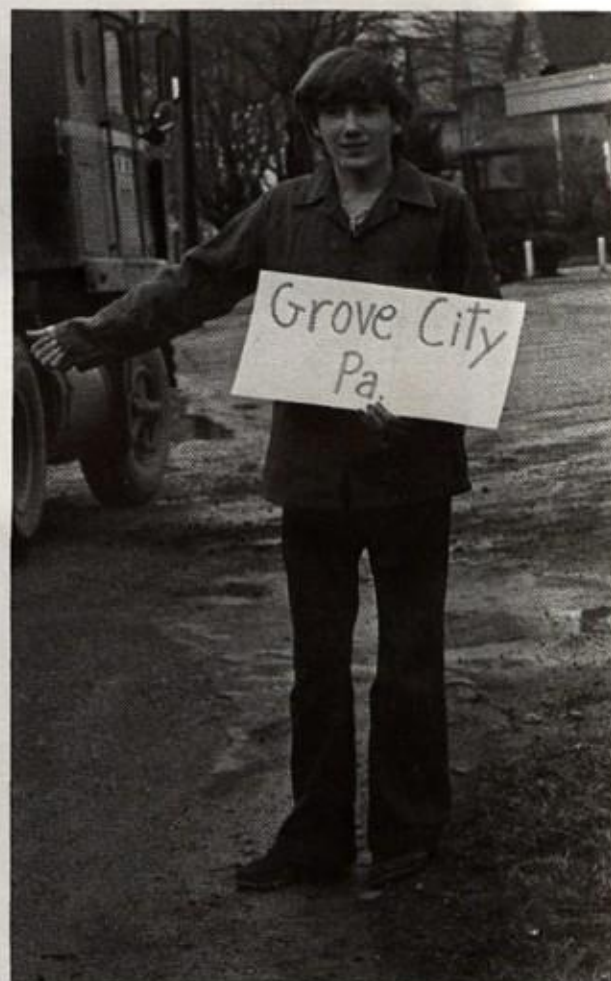

Rick Coy; Prowess

Jack Detwiler: Prestige

personalities:
candor, prowess,
prestige

Randy Colaizzi: Candor

Through the year Randy as first page editor has tried to transmit his own frankness and honesty to the Quaker Bi-Weekly. Rick's expert handling of the ball on the court earned him the title "the Little General." President of the Senior class, Jack worked hard to make his class one to be proud of.

Elliott Dunlap: Strength

Bonnie Dunn: Talent

Sharon Falk: Friendliness

Elliott showed his strength as an athlete during the football, wrestling, and track seasons. Bonnie upheld the Quaker tradition well as Basketball Sweetheart. Sharon cheered many students with her welcome smile and warm nature.

personalities:
strength, talent,
friendliness

personalities:
mastery, congeniality
sophistication

Barb Fraundofer: Sophistication

Tom Fisher: Mastery

Bob Herron: Congeniality

Tom displayed his well-developed athletic abilities on the basketball court and gridiron. With an "always-on-the-go" attitude, Barb was active in many SHS clubs. Drum Major Bob expertly led the band in their marching routines for his second year.

Sandy topped off a year of lively activities by capturing the Homemaker of the Year award. A quiet enthusiasm was shown by Bobbi in her numerous activities. Patti's experiences from singing in school choirs led to the more glamorous job of singing with a top name group.

Patti Pshsniak: Versatility

Bobbi Miller: Vitality

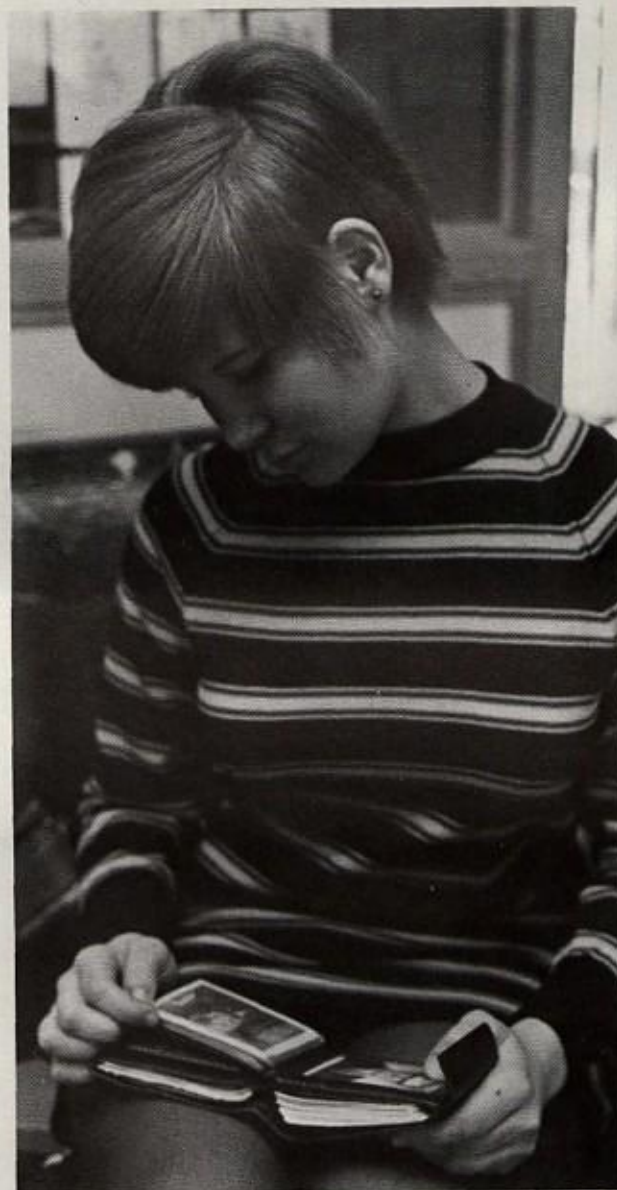

Sandy Jackson: Sensitivity

personalities:
sensitivity,
vitality, versatility

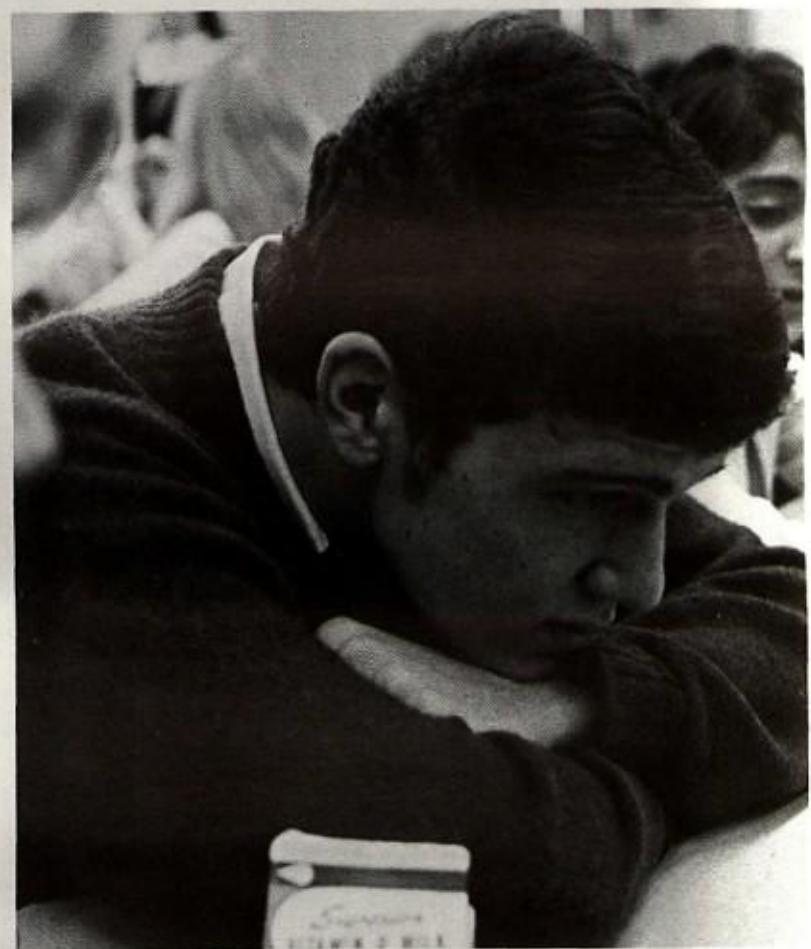

Bob's success as president of Student Council earned him a second year in the office. Determination describes Gary who is an active member of Key Club. Michele acquired a new family in Uruguay last year through the AFS program.

Bob Roberts: Responsibility

Michele Ross: Sincerity

Gary Roof: Ambition

personalities:
ambition, sincerity,
responsibility

Carol Vogel: Spirit

Carol, filled with the spirit of youth, infects all who meet her with her lively spirit and ready laugh. Throughout the year, varsity cheerleader Janis has exuberantly portrayed the Quaker spirit. Sharon displayed a touch of charm during her year as head majorette and Football Homecoming Queen.

Janis Walker: Animation

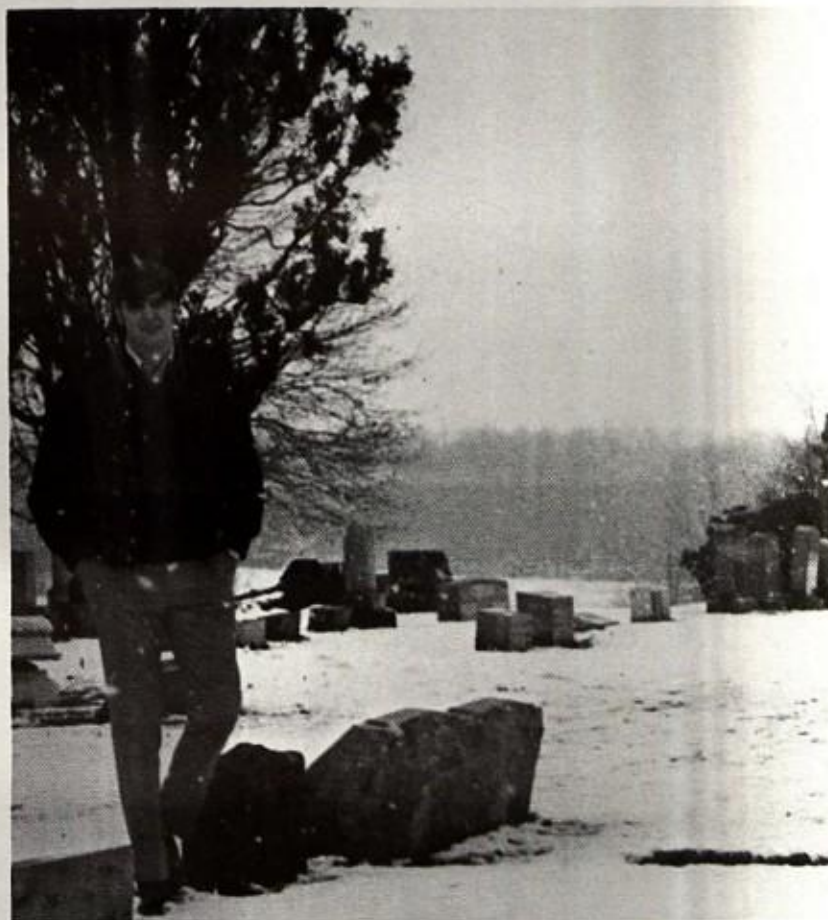

Sharon Wolf: Charm

personalities:
spirit, charm
animation

Quaker Queen: Donna Watkins

Once upon a time the Quaker King and Queen were crowned. They were cheerful and friendly, trustworthy and responsible, and able to lead their classmates through trying times. They were involved in many extra-curricular activities and volunteer services. The 1969–1970 Quaker King and Queen were Larry Hrvatin and Donna Watkins.

"The wherefore of my existence?
Perhaps to feel needed . . . or to hope that the joy of learning can be taught (or caught.)

To see the why of things and maybe tell them that life isn't quite so incomprehensible after all.

To hope to help and fall short and try again and win. ('Nothing is worth winning that wasn't fought for, 'I tell myself, and swallow hard and take a running start.)

To see a smile of recognition on the face of a student, or hear a mumbled 'Thank you,' from someone just over the top.

To recognize myself a few years past and to remember . . . the nightmarish insecurities, all those unanswered questions, the fear of failing.

Oh, I want to help. I want to show them how beautiful life can be!

Can't happiness and hope be taught?

Unfortunately, no . . . than why am I here?

Well, is anything really impossible? Is there anything more frustrating than working with youth?
And is there anything more rewarding
than chipping away at an obstacle?

I know sometimes I try too hard.
And I know, too, that I have far to go. But if I eliminate just one mistake a year, I have to get better, don't I?

And maybe I can just show them that battles can be won and lies will be bared and overcome by truth, and life can be beautiful . . .

If you're needed . . .

"Lived here."

"A couple of reasons for this. The school is one of the best in the area, and my husband works in Salem."

Why did you come to Salem to teach?

"Family."

"It was close to home."

"I moved here when I married a Salem resident."

"Married and moved to Salem."

"Convenient to home, offered position in which I was interested."

"This is my home. I was here a number of years before re-entering the profession."

"A good student is one who will go just a little farther than asked, who makes an effort. Also, a student who doesn't try to interfere with the learning of other students. One who shows respect for teachers, parents, students, but is not afraid to question. One who goes about accomplishing his purposes in the approved way, or at least tries. One who is tolerant of human frailties."

"One who works up to his capacity—not necessarily an 'A' student. One who is diligent, receptive, cooperative and healthy."

"One who gets excited about learning—and puts forth his or her second effort constantly."

"One who is in school to learn even if learning isn't easy."

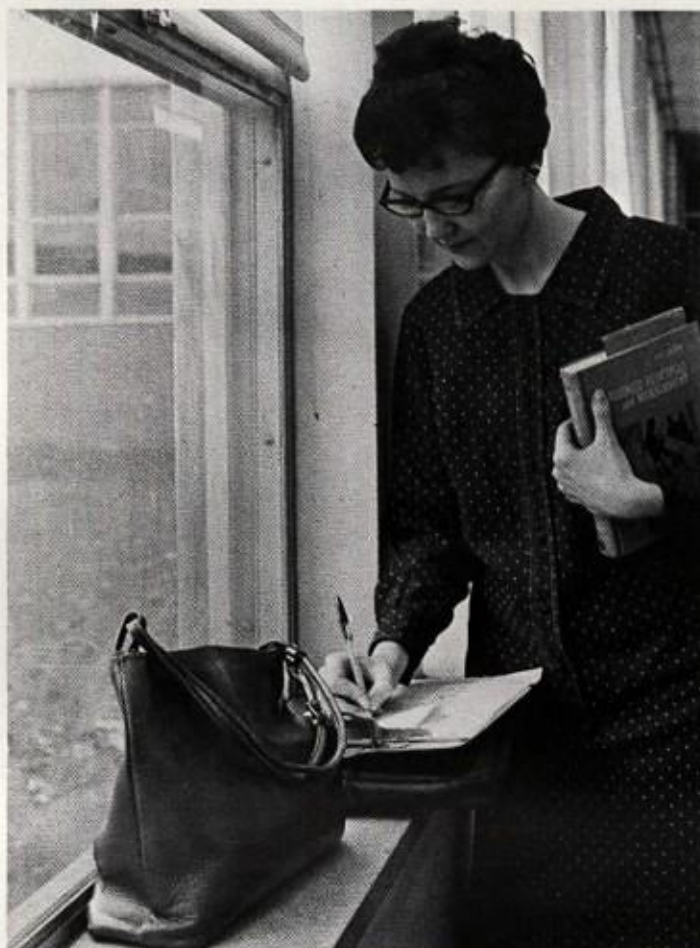

"A willing mind; one who asks to be taught, not dares one to try to teach; an eagerness to go beyond the assigned work; one who comes to class prepared with the tools of his trade; one who remembers a teacher is a human being and not a machine, one who knows that a school society must have rules for the general good and doesn't lie awake nights figuring out how to 'bug' the establishment."

"One who tries to do his best work at all times."

"A student who tries to cooperate in all situations for the good of the class. A student willing to help a fellow student having diffi-

"Keep up with paperwork. I have no trouble relating to students."

"Relating to students who feel that, because you are a teacher, you must be narrow-minded. Also, keeping a certain 'healthy distance between myself and students so that I am not taken advantage of."

"Attempting to motivate the unambitious."

"The public leading education, instead of education taking the lead."

"Relating to students. I spend most of my time trying to talk them into putting their talents to good use. Students often do not realize what a waste they are making of their high school years."

"Paperwork with not enough time to plan or grade. Secondly, student attitude toward learning is poorer year by year. Salem High kids don't know what work is."

What do you find most difficult in teaching?

"Discipline—it is extremely hard to be a 'friend' and 'keep order' at the same time."

"With 142 students and daily written work it is impossible to cover the material. Also it is no value to the student for me to write out corrections on each paper. It is far more valuable for the students to correct his own."

"I think we have a very fine student body."

"They are beautiful and sophisticated. But they are also rather over-protected and snobbish. I get the feeling they don't know a good situation when they see it."

What is your impression of the Salem student body compared with those of other schools?

"Basically conservative. Too many students display disrespect for teachers, school property, or any kind of authority."

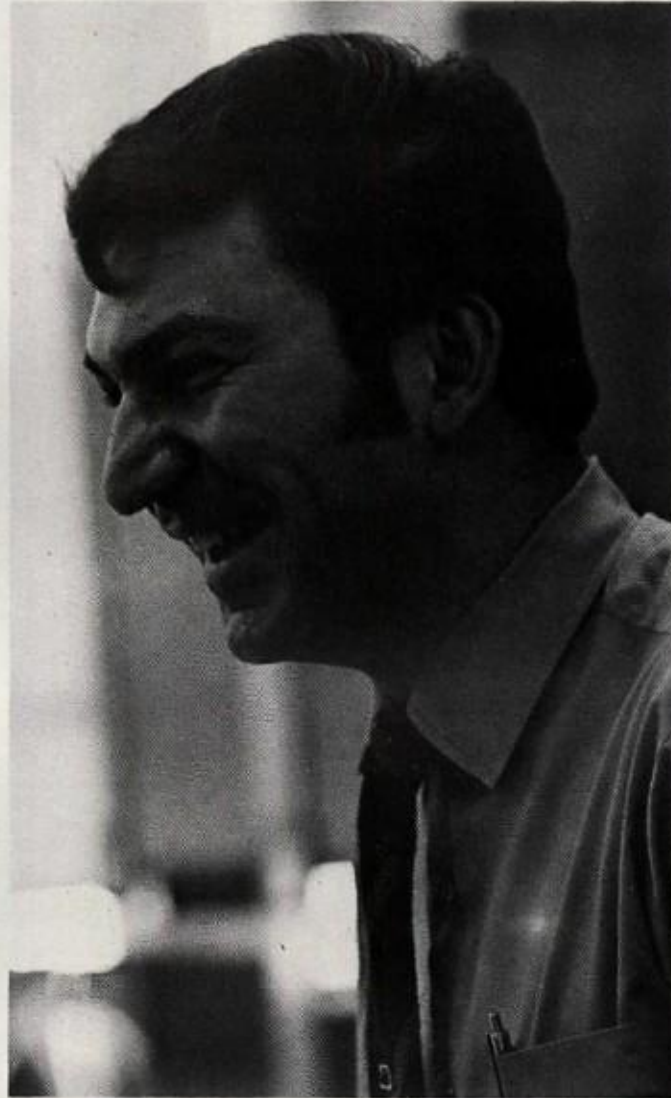

"GREAT!"

"Conservative but very unfriendly. They tend to stick to their own groups. It is difficult for a new student to be accepted as an equal."

"Middleground: better than some, worse than others. In politeness marked compared to some others I have visited."

"Similar to others."

"I have no direct comparison since I am so involved I do not get to other schools. For the most part I feel our student body is a fine group."

"The reaction of the students."

"Laughing. Having a student make that big breakthrough into understanding. Or having a student previously bored show a sudden interest. I've found that there is nearly always something good in every day to offset any bad."

"A simple thank you for something! From anyone, particularly a student."

"Having my students see or understand what it is I have been telling them these many months."

"The dawn of recognition on a student's face when explaining a principle or way of doing something. Achievement for a student beyond what he has previously done. Truly happy smiles on students' faces, not blasé indifference."

What is the thing that turns a blah day into a worthwhile day of teaching?

"When I feel I have helped the students in efforts to understand without 'forcing' them to do so."

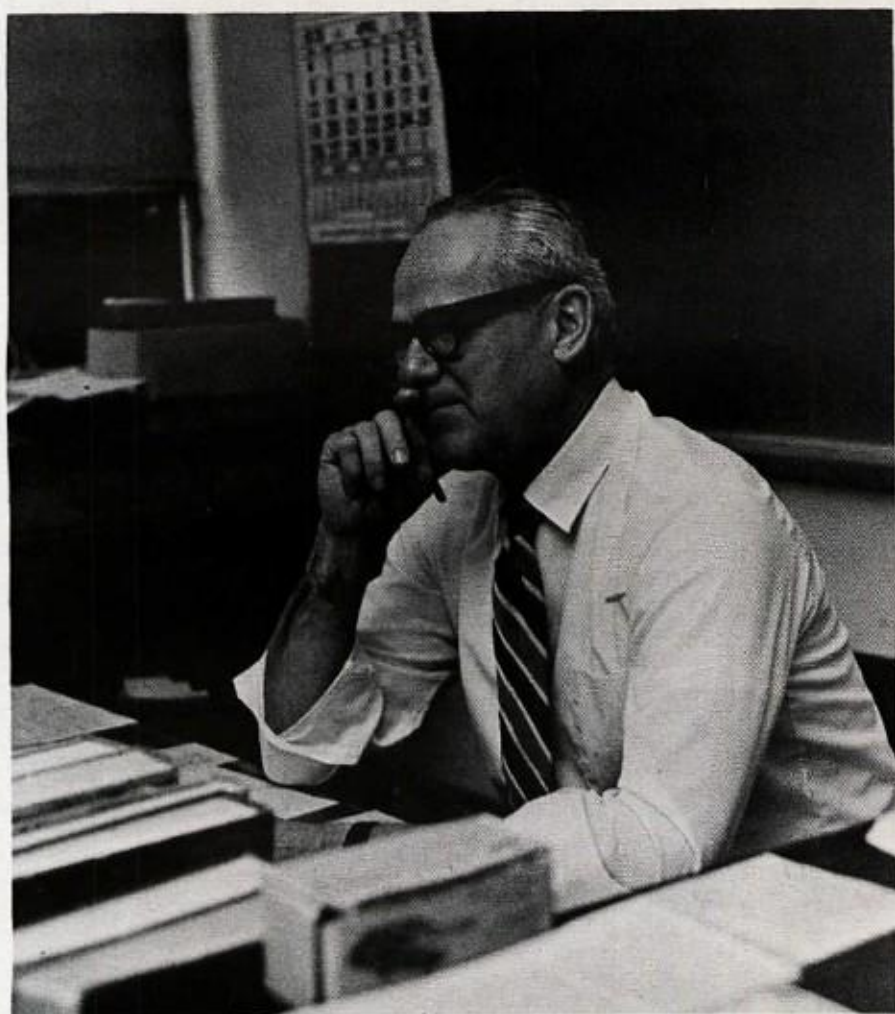

"To have the students exhibit interest and cooperate in whatever project we are attempting. If I have a good valid reason to not teach (illness, etc.), I can always turn the class over to a student to carry out my lesson plans."

"Lazy teacher."

"One who doesn't give the students a chance to express themselves; one who doesn't perform the duties of his job; one who shows no professionalism; one who is teaching and doesn't want to be."

What is your idea of a poor teacher?

"One who takes no personal interest in his students, whose teaching is stereotyped, who refuses to follow rules and regulations, and who is more interested in salary than a job well done."

"One who is inconsistent with himself, and can't defend his position without taking it on a personal basis."

"One who ignores rules and feels they don't apply to him."

"A passive bump-on-a-log behind the desk. One who uses prepared tests instead of his own. One who does not return graded papers and discuss them with students."

"One who expects more of the students than of himself."

"A teacher not interested in the student as a person. A teacher not loyal to the profession. A teacher not cooperating with our immediate administration. A teacher interested in the paycheck and nothing else."

"No—I like teaching very much."

"No. I can't think of anything I'd rather do. I enjoy the contact with the students, the intellectual stimulation of teaching, and the environment of young, progressive people. Besides, I learn more by teaching students than I ever did in school."

"No. I enjoy working with youth. It is a rewarding experience to see students develop and mature mentally."

"No! Everyone must feel needed by others—either to help or to annoy. At any rate—teaching satisfies this need I have."

"Yes, if I could get the same money elsewhere with fewer problems."

If you had a choice, would you leave the profession?

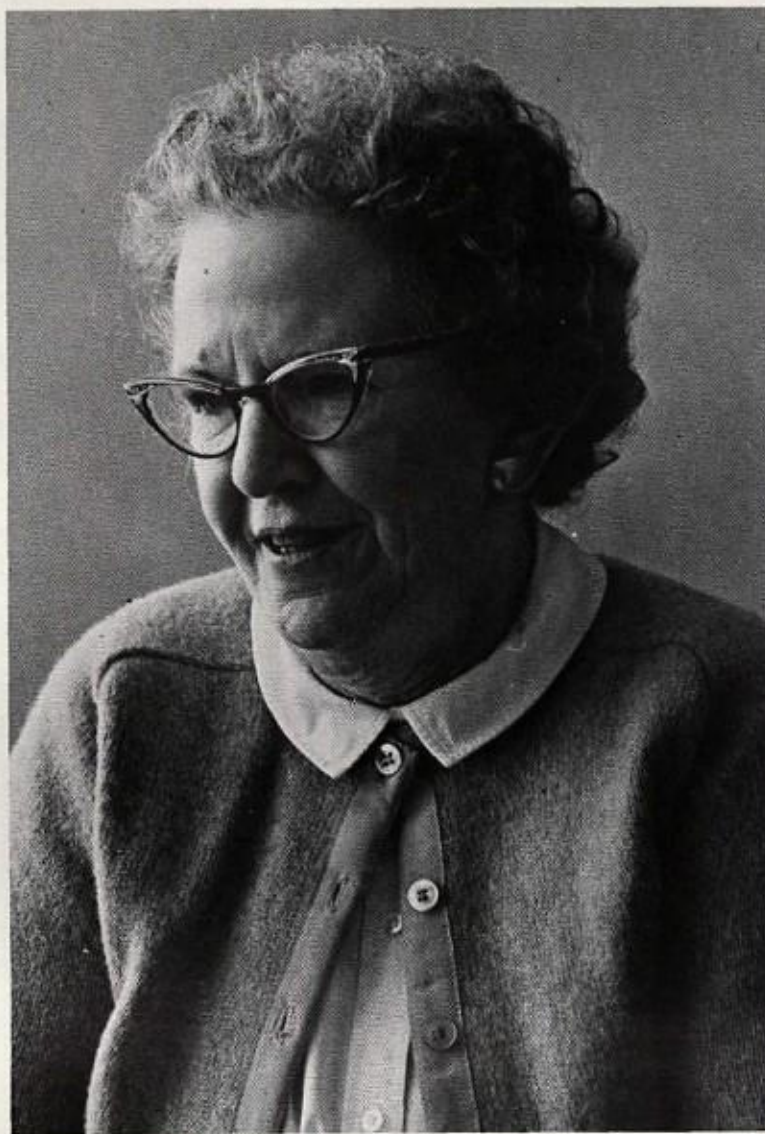

"No, unless to retire. I enjoy teaching."

"... part of the time. I think that, everything considered, Mr. Marra has done a pretty good job this year. He has been as fair as a principal can be and still keep discipline in the school. My only gripe.....to me. I'm glad that J.C. is back, even though we do have to start carrying birth certificates through the halls again. I'm talking from experience; if you leave class when Mr. Callahan is in the halls you had better darn well have a pass, or..... from your ideas. In my opinion the administration has done a fine job this year. I know I'm the principal, but that fact does not bias my opinion concerning the administration's fine work. Now as for..... take the time to do these things. The secretaries were very helpful, not only in their secretarial duties, but also in things such as the commencement tickets, the caps and gowns, the..... for that. As for "senior skip-out day," "I, as one of the seniors who skipped out, believe that the administration handled the affair as fairly as possible under the circumstances. I especially liked the idea of getting double time off detention for cleaning up after the prom. This is a good way to put detention time to good use, instead of just sitting..... can change that. I personally did not like the way the administration handled the kids that skipped out. I heard one teacher say that if it had just been two or three instead of fifty or sixty they would only have gotten three nights. It doesn't seem fair to punish students more heavily simply because more of them did it..... than he had been. Mr. Phillips is just a great guy. It seems in incidents such as the skip out day that Mr. Phillips is on the side of the students rather than another member of the administration. And another thing is that he is in the..... in order to get a book. Just as either of the librarians. Mrs. Gbur is always ready to help the student in need. I really don't see how they got that book-case..... for her. Mrs. Cope is always ready to help a student with a problem, whether it is about something in school or about something after graduation. All the counselors at SHS are this way. Always ready and willing to help with the students problems. With the equipment and training they have, they can be a great help in deciding what plans to make after graduation. If I were on your say-so. My hat goes off to the nurses at SHS. They are fully capable to take care of almost any emergency which arises, be it a cut finger or a faint in the halls. I don't think people recognize enough the work that the nurses do at our school. Admittedly, If I got that I just don't know what to say about the cafeteria workers. I can't say that every meal is fit for a king and I wouldn't eat anywhere else, but I haven't heard of anybody dying yet from SHS food, and this we can only attribute to the chefs. I would rather to me. Ike is a great guy, and does a good job at the high school. He and his team keep everything in pretty good shape and deserve a good word here. I just wish Ike were easier to find then I'll do it. The administration did a good job this year: it is too bad the students couldn't have done a little more. Everyone says, "O but there is a student council." The SC does nothing but tell the students what the administration wants them to be told. A good example of this is the dress code. The administration says that the SC can make a dress code as long as we can veto it if it is not right. In other words, the administration is just putting words into the student council's mouth. It is not the fact that the dress code was not fair: It is just that if the administration wants a dress code why don't they make one instead of playing puppet with the student council. This is the main thing them to help me. I really appreciate the way the counselors are always ready to help a guy. You can go to them anytime of the day and they are ready to look up stuff about colleges or anything you want to know about. I hope there is someone just as willing to help in college I don't know what this school would be like without the janitors and staff to keep it clean and running right. It seems like when ever you come up to the school, no matter what time of day there is always someone up there working to get it ready for the next days classes. And Ike not only does a good job with maintenance, but he is also a friend to the students"

juniors: organized

Being a junior means upperclass status, holding down a job, having a drivers' license, and maybe even owning a car.

In addition, the title "junior" carries with it certain traditional advantages and certain unavoidable responsibilities.

Having successfully reached the third level in high school, juniors are entitled to attend the White Christmas dance and the Prom. To some these dances mean nothing, but to the majority, anticipation for these events is keen.

Along with the added social activities offered to juniors comes the arrival of class rings. These rings, the subject of much disagreement, are still a welcome arrival. Becoming a junior and an upperclassman creates a peculiar temper in a person which causes the junior year to be a memorable one.

sophomores: resourceful

A distinctive aura all their own, one of headstrong yet uncertain indulgence typifies the sophomore class. The sophomores are more or less left to themselves; they no longer have the distinction of being new, scared freshmen, yet they have not reached the status held by juniors. There are no official activities for the sophomore class such as formal dances or candy drives, and graduation is so far in the future that it is no more than a vague wish. The sophomores are not stagnant, though; they are not just marking time until next year. The accent in their class is on individuals—people who by necessity must act upon original, personal ideas instead of the ideas of a class advisor or tradition. And so the sophomores are the loners of the school, the "lost" class.

freshman: expectant

The freshman year is both a beginning and an ending as well as everything in between. It marks the beginning of one's high school life and, in a way, the beginning of adulthood, because by the time high school has done its worst, the people in it seem to grow a lot.

In fact, they are nearly formed as far as outlook and interests go. But that is too faraway to worry about. The most important and frightening change is learning to get along in a place where almost a thousand unknown upperclassmen are in control, living their own lives, while three hundred freshmen are reaching for some form of connection, some recognition, no matter how small. In the course of one year, freshmen realize they must start making a transition from dependency to individuality. The year is a functional but somewhat sad ending of rosy-cheeked childhood; it is the beginning of an era of self-definition.

gen discovers friendship and america in salem

This year, the American Field Service presented their Beginning-of-the-Year Assembly, not only as a welcome to Gen Komaki, but as a homecoming for a member. Michele Ross was welcomed back from a summer in Uruguay.

The year was highlighted by a faculty basketball game between West Branch and SHS.

Early in the year, Hi-Tri sent clothing, arts, and crafts to the Appalachian area. The club also played Santa Claus at Christmas by presenting a family with food and gifts.

They've sent cookies to Viet Nam, provided materials to the Day Care Center, and had a Mother-Daughter Banquet.

service gives a chance to find new byways

Interact sponsored a dance for the benefit of the Robert Bycroft School. Other activities have included the selling of Christmas greens and swim parties. The ski trip the club took proved to be an adventure to remember.

One of Salem High's most active groups, Key Club once again shows its service. This year, they provided a Thanksgiving basket to a Salem family. The Scholarship Banquet is also one of their annual projects. The boys become aware of the problems of the community and try to help.

anticipation of fun seen in witnesses of a classic event

This year, the annual German Club Christmas party was held at the home of Mrs. Allan Blicher, a native of Germany. The spirit lasted until the month of March, when a trip was planned. The club spent an exciting day in German Village, located in Columbus.

Spanish Club boasts travel in their midst; Michele Ross returned from Uruguay with slides and experiences. A field trip was taken to Cleveland to see Jose Greco. Other activities include the annual banquet at the end of the year.

student artists work toward goals of creative quality

Art Guild's 1969–1970 activities were characterized by enthusiasm and talent. Twenty-one displays of members were honored with awards of excellence at the National Scholastic Art Contest at Eastwood Mall. The club also sponsored the annual May Show and visited the Cleveland Institute of Art in the spring.

The Secretaries of Tomorrow is a fine example of devoted girls seeking a career in the wide world of business. The girls do machine work and have the Tom Wat sales. This year, they had a Christmas dinner.

goal reached through late night session

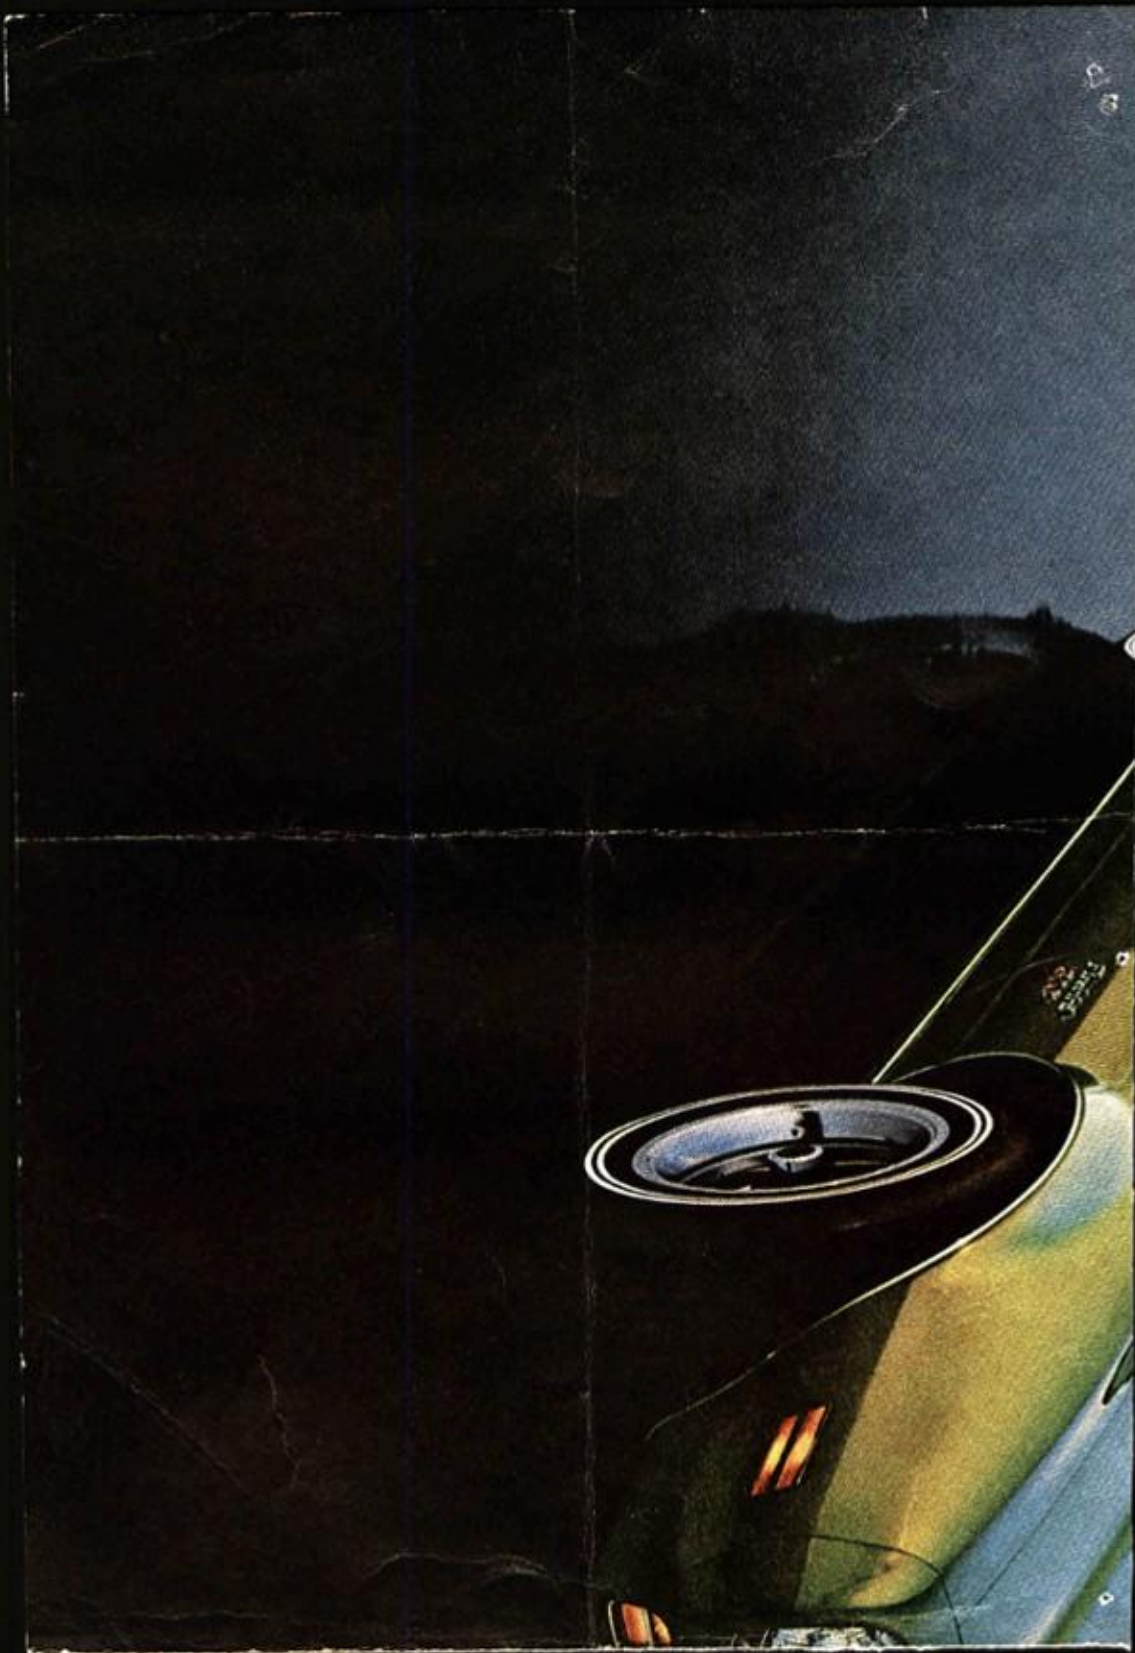

The Yearbook Staff creates a momento of the events of the school year. The work, headaches, and deadlines seem endless, but the final result is worth it. A dance was sponsored by the staff at which Quaker Royalty was announced. This year, a new advisor, Mrs. Patty Barrett, was welcomed to the staff.

curious students seek careers in science

The Future Scientists of America enjoyed their usual yearly activities including speakers as well as field trips. The annual Science Fair was held in March under the theme "To a Better America". The highlight of the year was a year-end field trip to Mammoth Caves. The A.V. Crew is the silent group behind the relief of classroom boredom. They are in charge of the movies, slides, and other audio-visual equipment.

valuable time is given as aide to busy teachers

The halls of Salem High are never completely empty. There roam the monitors, faithful guardians of the sacred halls into which it is taboo to venture without the magic, all-powerful, and easily forged "pass." Along with the monitors who are only doing their duty in policing the halls, are the office aides.

Office aides deliver phone messages and summons to the office, they answer telephones, and occasionally make special announcements.

They constitute a vital link between the students and THE OFFICE. Counselors' aides are not out and about as much, but they are of immeasurable help to the counselors in their task of advising the student body. Little praised, but hard working are the German and Geometry aides. At times, students, befuddled and confused by teachers' explanations, find the aides' layman explanation more easily understood. The German and Geometry aides must fend off and answer such questions as "What did Mrs. Loria mean by complementary angles" or "What in the heck is a Schnitzelbank?"

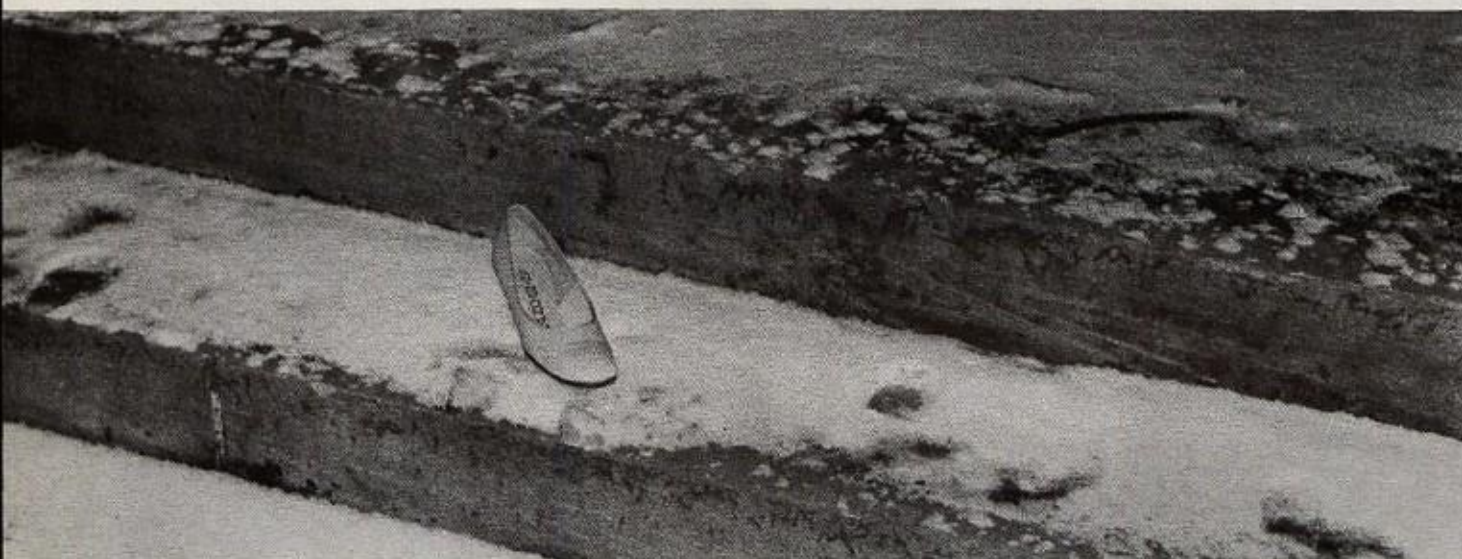

The school's legions of aides truly deserve a vote of thanks.

beautiful voices blend to enrich culture of youth

The average student's knowledge of choir workings consists of viewing the annual Christmas and spring concerts. But these concerts only represent the culmination of months of hard work on the part of the choir members, the accompanists, and the director. Day by day, the selected songs are practiced; they are torn apart and practiced sectionally, and sometimes, to the horror of the choristers, singly. This is resorted to only as a last resort when section members cannot come through with their part. Night practices are called at the times when the choir is preparing for the Music Festival. All in all, while choir is a lot of fun for the members, it also entails a lot of plain hardwork. Members must be willing to give some of their leisure time for practicing, so that when the high school students have the opportunity of hearing a choir concert, it is a concert that measures up to the high standards set by past concerts.

musical theme viewed in a precision pageant

An integral part of high school for some 120 students—a part which cannot be ignored or neglected. For, during football season, band practice is all-important, and many activities that band members long to attend must be put out of sight and mind. Low mumblings can be heard during prolonged practices. "... If he says 'start from the top' once more, I'm gonna scream! What does he want, the Purdue Marching Band?" But come Friday night, all bandmen forget their blistered feet, heat strokes, and sore muscles. Everyone is caught up in the tense excitement and anticipation of "putting on a good show." Concert season, while less physical, reaps the same gripes. Then, why do so many students continue in band for four years if it is so "unpleasant." Maybe it stems from a basic love of music and a desire to "create" that music. Maybe the close and warm fraternity among bandmen is the answer. Or, possibly, it's the director always ready with a helpful work or a witty reply. It could be any of these and, more likely, all three.

sports

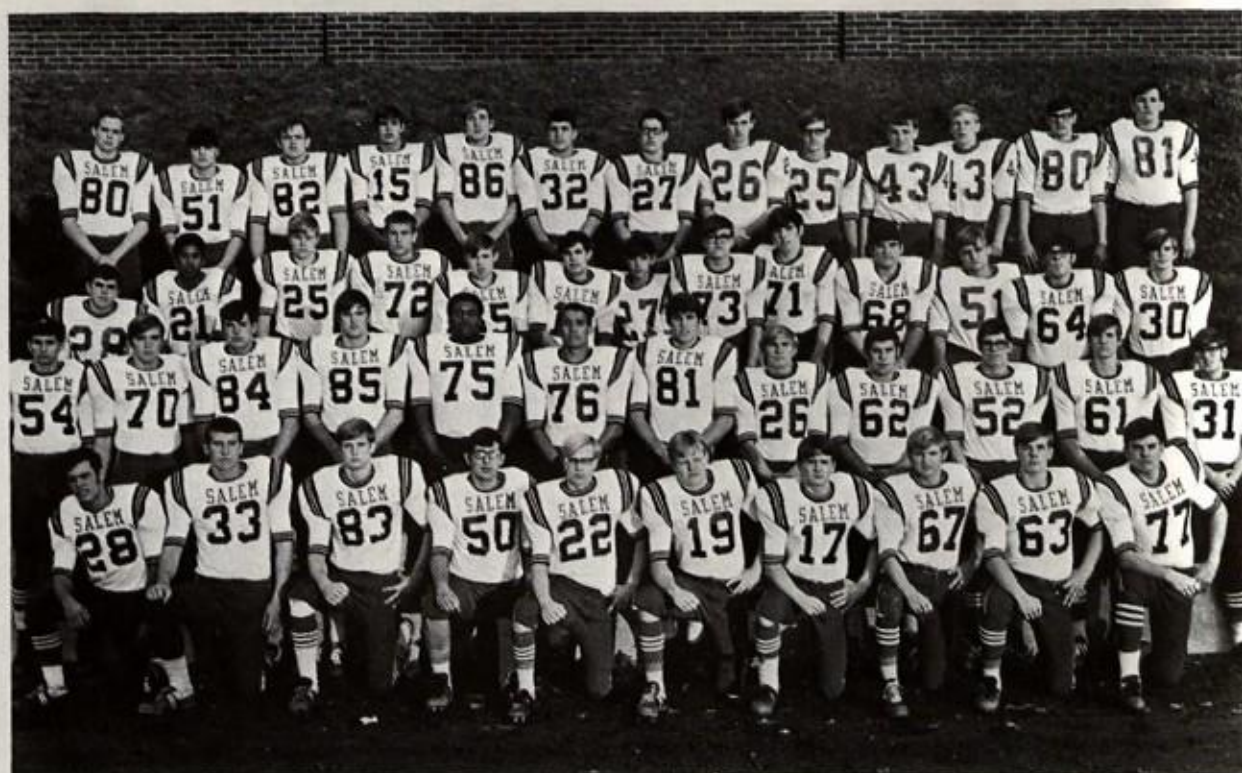

athletes; blur of action, portrait of grace

When an athlete puts aside his spikes or jersey or linament to ponder the proud meaning of sports, he knows he is laying the foundation of a meaningful life. Moving on the court or hitting on the field, to the accompaniment of pain, ecstasy, and a little hard nerve, the athlete has always believed that sports copied life, teaching him two valuable lessons. First, we all belong to the tribe of mankind; togetherness is the key. And second, every life is more than just existence; it is an exciting opportunity to do something uniquely worthwhile. Every boy in sports knows that he must give of himself, but here is always the comfort, at least the hope, that the rewards are double and carry beyond field and court to life itself. For the blur of action—consider the blur that is life. For the portrait of grace—know the grace that tames life.

rugged practices build endurances, develop skills

Although the Quaker football team possessed notable potential, they couldn't seem to get it together, posting a disappointing 2-7-1 record.

In a frustrating season marred by ungracious jabs from adult fans, the team built a strong defensive unit and managed to keep their spirit high throughout Coach Bob James' most unsuccessful season at the helm. Salem's two victories featured a crushing defeat of West Branch 40-0 and a hard-fought defensive battle with Canton Timken 7-6. Winning praise for his dazzling defensive play, end Tom Fisher, named to the North All-Star Team and the All-County unit, proved to be the Quakers' single most valuable asset. A season that began with a disheartening loss to Oak Glen ended with an 8-8 tie between Salem and the Wellsville Tigers in the last game of a 26-year rivalry.

experience and guidance become valuable aids

A young reserve squad and an excellent freshman team rounded out the football story for Salem. Enjoying the first undefeated season ever by a Quaker freshman football team was this year's ninth-graders who racked up a 5-0-2 record.

The frosh featured a powerful offense, as was evident in their 64-0 shellacking of West Branch. In summing up his first year as a Quaker gridder, one freshman commented, "It was teamwork that took us to the top, and we hope our success will carry over to our reserve and varsity years." The freshman were piloted by coaches Dave Brooks, Joseph Smith, and Alvie Hurray. The junior-varsity team handed in an unimpressive three wins and seven losses.

Two fine quarterbacks, Paul Campanelli and Tom Dominic, and other sophomore athletes showed promise as bright spots in future Quaker line-ups.

athletes forget personal glory, work for team

En route to the county championship, the Salem cross-country squad rolled up an impressive 8-2 record in dual and triangular encounters. The county meet, easily won by Salem's low score of 32, was a first for Columbiana County. Coach Mike Guappone had much to be proud of as the distance-runners not only captured the county crown but also qualified the entire team for both the district and regional meets for the second consecutive year. The Quakers were paced throughout the season by juniors Jim Shoff and Steve Keefer and seniors Jack Shoff, Dave Curtis, Frank Reed, Bob Roberts, and Dave Hauer. Keefer, the number two runner for most of the season behind Jim Shoff, emerged as the pace-setter in the last few contests of the campaign and in the final race set a new course record of 10:02.

underclass teams show a promise for the future

Coach Don Bennett's varsity wrestling team, improving yearly, tallied its first winning record in the Northeastern Ohio League with a 4-3 slate. The overall mark for the team was a respectable 4-6-1. Captain Jeff Zimmerman, wrestling in the 115-pound weight division, became Salem's first sectional champion. The veteran grappler also had most wins in a season (18) and most wins in a high school career (36). Other matmen standouts included sophomore Bob Plegge, who placed fourth in the sectional, and Senior Dave Plegge, who accumulated the most pins (5). With dedicated effort, the grapplers steadily increased their crowd-drawing appeal. In reserve wrestling action the results were equally impressive with the JV's chalking up a 6-3 record. Coach Paul Headland proved an able mentor in his first year as reserve coach.

season's contests are highlighted by rival struggles

Against some of the toughest opponents in the state, the Salem basketball team surprised even themselves by carding a 15-6 record. The Cabasmen defeated five of their first six opponents, including state powers Toledo Libbey and Columbus Walnut Ridge. Season play provided area fans with a host of breathtaking photofinishes, including a double overtime, last-second decisions, and stunning comebacks. Among Salem's defeats were two heartbreaking losses to Boardman and Wellsville. Aided by their height advantage, state semifinalist Boardman rallied to conquer the Quakers in the second half. The Wellsville battle was nip and tuck, with the Tigers edging the Red and Black, beset by foul trouble, in the final minutes. Larry Hrvatin, team captain, was the workhorse for the Quakers, leading the squad in rebounding and scoring.

devoted individuals strive toward super excellence

Basketball on both the junior varsity and freshman levels slumped this year. In their first losing season in quite some time, the reserve cagers rounded out the year with an 8-10 mark. Several of the games which could have gone either way were dropped in overtime play. Juniors Jim Shoff and Bob Rutkousky paced the JV's, with additional rebounding strength provided by freshman Howie Jesko. Because of the enthusiastic turnout of freshman hopefuls, two teams were necessary this year. Dividing the prospects into two squads, titled freshman "A" and "B," gave more of the young basketball boys an opportunity to play for the Red and Black. Freshman "A," the more successful of the two, compiled a winning 7-6 record, while the "B" team came out on the losing end with two wins and 10 losses.

Summer workouts and an extensive winter track program combined to prepare the Salem cindermen for their spring campaign in which they compiled a 3-3 record. Enthusiastic fans witnessed outstanding team efforts as well as individual performances. Against Alliance, district champion, the Quakers came through with a remarkably determined effort and missed carrying off an upset by two points, being nosed out 62-60. Dan Russell, junior shot putter, was the only record-breaker on the team as he heaved the iron ball 57'11", bettering both the school and county marks. Also highlighting for the Quakers were the two relay teams, both capturing honors in the county meet. The freshman team, under Coach Mike Guappone, managed only an 0-6 record despite the efforts of Joe Miller and Don Paynter, who set new records in the pole vault and mile run.

Spring brought new coaches to the baseball and golf teams, and a fruitful season it was for both sports. Under Ralph Hoehn's guidance the hardballers experienced their best season since 1951, winning a string of eight victories, losing four, and tying one. The Quakers showed strength in the pitching and hitting departments. Star hurler Denny Niederhiser carded a 5-1 won-lost record for the campaign. Consistent hitting was provided by Dale Cody, Dave Paxson, Rudy Markovich, and Dan Steffel, all batting over .300. The golf team also scored well with a 7-8 mark under Coach Steve Krivonak. In the district match, with more than 40 participating teams, the Quakers finished in the upper half. High point of the season occurred in Salem's victory over Poland when senior Bill Odorizzi blasted a 39, low score for the year.

patrons; parents and professional

Let's talk . . . about this place . . . What is it?
Is it just an environment where we are molded
to its institutions, professions, pleasures and hardships
or is it a united community where we and they learn, work and communicate together?
Is this place just a materialistic setting for life or is it its people?
Do you and I count
in this place
or are we just here
controlled by the chosen few who do count?
Is life in other places the same as it is here
or is there a difference from here and there?
Does this place offer
security and comfort in the future
or just despair and hardships?
Will we forget this place if we leave it behind or will it bring back memories?
I don't know.

If these be vague words,
then seek not
to clear them.
Vague and nebulous
is the beginning
of all things,
but not their end,
and I fain would have you remember me
as a beginning.
Ready am I to go,
and my eagerness
with sails
full set awaits
the wind . . .

—Kahlil Gibran

farewell

Here you have the 1970 yearbook; not a shining literary achievement and a somewhat limited chronicle of the year. Nevertheless, it has come into existence, the product of work, occasional good times, disappointments, desperation, administrative "cooperation," and time freely given, especially that of Mr. Robinson, Mrs. Barrett, Mr. Denman, and all those staff members. And all this has whatever value you want to find in it.

I see in this book both an end and a beginning: an end to all that has been familiar for twelve years, the beginning of a real life.

I see, too, a sense of the struggle and uncertainty involved in creating, the vulnerability of offering your finished creation to be judged. Yes, it's both a death and a rebirth, for because of and in spite of all it represents, I am going on to something new.
